$1.6M raised for Community Foundation

■ Spokesman: 'It's the seed money ... snowball'

By Chuck Stinnett

In one of the biggest fund-raising drives here in memory, donations and pledges topping $1.6 million to endow the Community Foundation of Henderson were announced Thursday evening.

Income and interest earned from those funds are intended to help support a host of non-profit organizations across Henderson for years to come — perhaps indefinitely.

Foundation advocate Chase Fulcher said this announcement isn't the conclusion, but just the beginning.

"It's the seed money," Fulcher said. "It's the snowball" that he and other foundation supporters say could grow into a landslide of funds that could benefit this community in the next change of generations.

Walt Dear, the former Gleaner owner who foresaw the concept of a community foundation a generation ago, agreed. "Keep on keeping on," Dear said during Thursday's event. "This is the beginning ... And never quit."

The Kentucky Philanthropy Initiative — headed by Henderson native Judith Clabes — calculates that over the next 50 years, a staggering $2.76 billion in wealth will transfer from one generation in Henderson County to another.

That vision inspired a group of young professionals in the Henderson Leadership Initiative a couple of years ago to carry out the establishment of the Community Foundation of Henderson.

The foundation, operating for now under the umbrella of the already-established Community Foundation of West Kentucky, is intended to serve as a non-profit vehicle and investment manager that can direct donors' funds into their churches and favored charities.

"We were looking for a megaphone," Julie Wischer, an HLI graduate and current president of the Community Foundation of Henderson, said. "A megaphone found us" in the form of Fulcher, who said Thursday that he be-

Artist takes advantage of 'lots of wall space'

By Donna B. Stinnett

Artist Jonathan Hittner is exhibiting in tonight's Art Hop Gallery Show & Sale presented by the Downtown Henderson Partnership, but he has one small difference from other artists participating in the fourth-annual event.

He doesn't have to relocate his artwork.

Hittner's exhibit space is in his home at 223 ½ Second St., which is an upstairs apartment he shares with Henderson Area Arts Alliance Executive Director Kyle Arnett above Belle Boutique.

"It was really great to open our home and have people over," said Hittner, who participated in last year's Art Hop, also noting that it's good to be able to talk to visitors about art and help promote that kind of dialogue in the community.

"Art has been around since the beginning of time," he said, "and it's important as a way to communicate."

He said the event in general is a good way to expose people to art forms they may never have had the opportunity to see before.

Hittner, an Evansville native who studied art at the University of Southern Indiana and also at the San Francisco Art Institute, has been on the receiving end of that himself during various times in his life.

"I studied painting at both those places," he said, adding that studying art at the graduate level provided a forum for "talking to some really smart people" about art and for having different experiences through creating art and observing the work of others.

For tonight's exhibit, Hittner's visitors will be able to see work he's created over the past 10-15 years from works "7 inches square to 7-feet-by-7-feet" as well as six or seven new paintings.

"We've got a lot of wall space, which is nice," the artist said, explaining that their 14-foot ceilings provide a lot of room.

'Unbridled' test results arrive with new focus

■ Goal is to prepare Kentucky students for college or career

By Victoria Grabner

A brand new set of test results is being released to the public today, and the buzz phrase is college and career readiness.

But as you wade through the voluminous data for each school — detailed test results are available online — keep in mind that this isn't last year's test.

Readers will likely have questions. They may even be puzzled by what all the new data means for local students and teachers.

That's why The Gleaner will be giving its readers an introduction to this new assessment and accountability model, referred to as Unbridled Learning: College/Career Readiness for All.

We will be focusing on the highlights, as in: Why

Jobs, education cited as key in 7th District race

Gleaner staff

State Rep. John Arnold of Sturgis has represented the 7th House District since 1995, but this year saw opposition in both the primary and general elections.

Arnold won the Democratic primary, but faces Republican Tim Kline of Owensboro on Election Day.

The 7th District has only eight voting precincts in Henderson County, although it also contains all of Union County and the western half of Daviess County. The Henderson County precincts are Hebbardsville-Bluff City, Reed-Beals, both Robards precincts, both Niagara precincts, South Corydon and South Cairo.

The candidates were posed the following question by email and their responses, in the same order candidates appear on the sample ballot, were also via email. Their answers, for all intents and purposes, are as they wrote them, although The Gleaner has made minor modifications to conform to newspaper style and to correct any misspellings.

Here is the question: What three issues would be your main focus as a state legislator?

KLINE

1. Jobs. We need to help the middle class by drawing jobs to Kentucky. We need to move away from a system of bribing companies to come here and instead create a tax and regulatory environment that is appealing to all companies. Our tax code should be streamlined and we should consider moving toward a consumption-tax based system, which encourages savings and investment. Every single

Howell's 'servant's heart' remembered

By Chuck Stinnett
cstinnett@thegleaner.com

Dr. Gaynor Howell Jr., who died suddenly on Wednesday at age 75, is being remembered as a both a pillar in his church and a force within the local Salvation Army.

"There are two places in Henderson that are really going to miss him tremendously: the First Baptist Church and the Salvation Army," friend and fellow church and board member Jay Coursey said.

"Gaynor has been a longtime contributor, member and deacon of First Baptist Church and served on several different committees," he said.

And Coursey marveled that Howell would retire and "then work as hard as he has for the Salvation Army. Without Gaynor, the Salvation Army wouldn't be as strong as it is now ...

"He is a man who will be missed."

Friends stunned by his unexpected death had difficulty speaking of Howell in the past tense Thursday.

"Gaynor is the heart and soul of the Henderson Salvation Army," Erick Dalton, who chairs its Advisory Board, said. "He is the epitome of what the Salvation Army is all about — about serving. He has a servant's heart."

Dr. Gaynor Howell Jr.

Howell, a Chattanooga native known by friends and family as "Big Daddy," came with his wife, Barbara, in 1966 to Henderson, where he practiced obstetrics and gynecology for 30 years.

"He was a great physician ... He was a wonderful person," Dr. John Logan, retired medical director at Methodist Hospital, said. "He was a great guy to work with. You can't say enough good things about Gaynor. He lived every day to the fullest. He was just a plain person; what you saw was what you got."

Deaths

Marshall Gaynor Howell Jr., M.D.

With great sorrow, we announce the passing of Marshall Gaynor Howell Jr., M.D., on Oct. 31, 2012. He passed unexpectedly in the presence of family and friends at Methodist Hospital in Henderson.

Gaynor, affectionately known as Big Daddy by family and friends, touched many lives during his 75 years. He was born Oct. 4, 1937, in Chattanooga, Tenn., to Marshall Gaynor Howell Sr. and Elizabeth Wilkerson Howell. He graduated from The McCallie School in 1955. He attended the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga for his undergraduate studies and received his medical degree from the University of Tennessee Medical School in Memphis. In 1961, Gaynor married Barbara Louise Burkhardt, a UT nursing graduate from Knoxville, Tenn. They served in the Air Force in Grand Forks, N.D., after his internship and went on to an obstetrics and gynecology residency at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville.

Following his postgraduate studies, Barbara and Gaynor moved to Henderson, where he practiced obstetrics and gynecology from 1966 until his retirement in 1996. His partners were Joe McGruder, M.D., A.D. Sprague, M.D., Jorge Cardenal, M.D., Dennis Owen, M.D., Marcia Cave, M.D., and Marshall G. Howell III, M.D. Louise Buckman worked with Dr. Howell as his office nurse for more than 25 years. In his professional career, Gaynor tirelessly served our community and Methodist Hospital, delivering thousands of our children and serving as a leader of the medical staff.

Since his retirement, Gaynor's energy was poured into his family and service to his Lord as a deacon of Henderson's First Baptist Church and with the Salvation Army. As a transplant to Kentucky, he was a huge Wildcat fan. His love of politics and fast cars was legendary.

Gaynor is survived by his wife of 51 years, Barbara; his children, Ellie Coursey of Henderson, Dr. Marshall Howell of Henderson and Sarah Jenkins of Prosper, Texas; son-in-law, Marty Coursey; daughter-in-law, Dr. Jennifer Howell; son-in-law, Stephen Jenkins; his beloved grandchildren are Lily Coursey, Marty Coursey Jr., Marshall G. Howell IV, Jackson N. Howell, Davis M. Howell, Katherine Jenkins, Millie Jenkins and Jake Jenkins. Also survived by his Aunt Mary Alice Wilson of Chattanooga, and cousins, Judy Elington of Chattanooga, Maureen Ward of Lakewood, Ga., Jean Smallwood of Huntsville, Ala., the Rev. Joy Parrish of New York City, Charlie Parrish of Sand Pointe, Idaho, Bobby Parrish of Albany, Ga., Julie Gasbarri of Half Moon Bay, Calif., Steve Kirby of Sand Pointe, Scott Kirby of Yorba Linda, Calif., and Jerry Kirby of McKinney, Texas.

Gaynor loved his Lord, his family and his community. He will be greatly missed by all who had the privilege of knowing this great man.

Friends may call at Benton-Glunt Funeral Home today from 2 to 8 p.m. and again from 9:30 a.m. until the memorial service at Henderson's First Baptist Church on Saturday at 10:30 a.m. The Rev. Todd Linn, Ph.D., will officiate.

Expressions of sympathy may take the form of contributions made in Gaynor's name to First Baptist Church, the Salvation Army or the Henderson Regional Hospital Foundation.

Arrangements entrusted to Benton-Glunt Funeral Home. Online condolences may be made at www.bentonglunt.com.

Public record

The following information is based on public records from local and area law enforcement agencies and/or court systems:

HENDERSON POLICE DEPARTMENT

■ Someone shoplifted two Dewalt drills from Lowe's, 2190 U.S. 60-East, on Tuesday morning. The drills are valued at more than $500. The man is described as a white male, around 30 years old wearing a gray Addidas hoodie and dark blue jeans. He was last seen getting into a green Chevrolet Envoy with Indiana registration.

■ A resident in the 200 block of Rooney Drive reported Wednesday that someone stole his 2007 Chevy Impala from his residence sometime between Tuesday night and midmorning on Wednesday. The vehicle was located at Wal-Mart and returned to the owner.

HENDERSON CIRCUIT COURT

■ Patricia K. Burr, 32, Mount Vernon, Ind., pleaded guilty Thursday to receiving stolen property under $10,000. Charges of complicity and being a second-degree persistent felony offender were dismissed. Sentencing is Dec. 3.

■ Robert E. Chaney, 50, 600 block of Fifth Street, pleaded guilty on Friday, Oct. 26, to driving under the influence (fourth offense) and leaving the scene of an accident. He was sentenced to three years on the first offense and 12 months on the second. Sentences are to run concurrently.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Those charged with crimes are considered innocent until they are found guilty in a court of law. Every effort is made by this newspaper to report the final disposition of each case. In the event we fail to do so, a call to our newsroom, 827-2000, will prompt a background check on those cases and, if necessary, a published report on final disposition.

Derailed tanker burns, no end in sight

■ Three people hospitalized, hundreds evacuated

By Bruce Schreiner and Dylan Lovan
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — The blaze that authorities initially said would end in a couple of hours instead spewed flames and smoke from a derailed tanker car for a second day Thursday with no end in sight, as crews scrambled to prevent it from igniting railcars loaded with toxic chemicals nearby.

Hundreds of people have had to evacuate, including the entire town of West Point and some people from nearby Louisville. The burning butadiene, a chemical commonly found in rubber used to make tires, can damage the central nervous system and reproductive system. Workers were hosing down other railcars nearby filled with another corrosive chemical, hydrogen fluoride, which can cause severe respiratory damage.

All the water used to keep those cars cool, however, raised fears that the water could become contaminated and wash into the confluence of the Salt and Ohio rivers. The Environmental Protection Agency was monitoring water quality and quickly erecting a dam to keep out contaminated water.

“This is as bad as it gets as far as a hazmat incident, if it were to be released,” said Art Smith, an emergency coordinator with the EPA.

Three workers were hospitalized after the blaze ignited Wednesday, one of whom remained in critical condition. Another worker, a contracted consultant, was released on Thursday, Paducah & Louisville Railway officials said. They had been using a cutting torch to separate two cars at the site of Monday’s derailment, after being told by air quality monitors that the air was clear and the torch safe to use, said Gerald Gupton with the Paducah & Louisville Railway.

Asked if the workers who supplied the misleading air measurements were responsible for the fire, Gupton replied, “Absolutely not. It was an accident.”

When further pressed about who was responsible, he said, “I’m not prepared to answer that right now. The investigation is being conducted.”

On Thursday, workers were siphoning styrene — another toxic chemical used in rubber — from one stricken railcar. Otherwise, the main concern and biggest threat of danger was the cars filled with hydrogen fluoride that were within about 10 feet of the burning car. Gupton said those cars would be carefully moved so that the chemical can be removed.

Officials had expected the fire to burn itself out within a couple of hours, but it is now unclear exactly how long it would burn.

“We can’t get up and look in the hole and take any measurements with the conditions as they are,” Gupton said.

That left residents like 30-year-old April Graham and her three children — ages 14, 11 and 7 — to sleep on cots at an elementary school-turned-shelter after a hasty evacuation that they had at first imagined would be brief. The family ate ham sandwiches for dinner; her youngest son played basketball and ran the hallways with other children to pass the time.

“We just want to go home,” she said when asked how the family was holding up. “Depressed, don’t know what’s going to happen.”

The train derailed on a line that runs between Paducah in western Kentucky and Louisville, which is home to rubber manufacturers and other chemical plants, most of them concentrated in the Rubbertown neighborhood.

The Paducah & Louisville Railway train derailed Monday morning near Dixie Highway.

Volunteer firefighters from Niagara, Robards and the Henderson City-County Rescue Squad hose down the remains of an outbuilding Thursday behind a house at 9419 Kentucky 136 near the intersection with U.S. 41-South.

Police: Case of falling woman ruled a suicide

By Richard Gootee
gooteer@courierpress.com
812-464-7431

The woman who died after falling from the sixth floor of the Casino Aztar parking garage Wednesday has been identified as Evansville resident Natalie J. Kamp, 19.

Evansville police Sgt. Jason Cullum said investigators have ruled the death a suicide based on evidence found at the scene and discussions with Kamp’s family. He did not disclose the specifics of what was found at the crime scene.

On Wednesday, police said they were looking for Eric S. Stucker, 23, after he was seen leaving the garage in car that was registered to Kamp.

“No foul play is suspected (in her death).”

Sgt. Jason Cullum,
Evansville police

Cullum said Stucker was an acquaintance of Kamp’s and that Stucker is cleared of any wrongdoing in connection with her death.

“No foul play is suspected (in her death),” Cullum said.

Stucker was arrested Wednesday on an unrelated charge and is currently in the Vanderburgh County jail.

According to police, Kamp was enrolled in classes at the University of Southern Indiana.

Police investigate needle in candy bag

WINCHESTER, Ky. — Police in Winchester say they are investigating after the parents of an 8-year-old girl reported finding a medical needle in her bag of Halloween candy.

Winchester police told WKYT-TV that they are investigating, but they think the incident was accidental and isolated.

Police say the girl’s parents took her to the hospital as a precaution.

Neighbor Jennifer Parks says it’s scary for the entire neighborhood and that many parents threw candy out after hearing about the incident.

Tornado-ravaged county gets funding

FRANKFORT — Tornado-ravaged Morgan County will receive some $7.6 million in state funding to improve its roads.

Gov. Steve Beshear announced the funding during a stop in West Liberty on Wednesday. He said the money will resolve a long-standing traffic problem and speed recovery from a devastating tornado earlier this year.

Beshear said the biggest project involves widening and improving the main road through West Liberty at a cost of $7.2 million.

Tiny Kentucky town to keep post office

OAKLAND, Ky. — U.S. Postal Service officials have decided to keep an office in the small city of Oakland open but reduce its hours.

The Daily News (<http://bit.ly/VeLWCa>) reports the announcement was made Tuesday afternoon during a meeting at Oakland City Hall in Warren County. Fourteen of the city’s 225 residents attended the meeting and said they were happy with the decision.

‘Big Daddy’ Gaynor Howell was generous with both his time and money

He was called Big Daddy, and he loved it. Gaynor Howell was the paternal figure at the Salvation Army. It was Gaynor who took the barrels to the school during our canned goods drive. It was Gaynor who supervised the bell ringers. It was Gaynor who hosted the Salvation Army Christmas party and the planning sessions for the golf tournament.

In the 12 years I worked with Gaynor, there was a consistent theme in his thoughts and actions that churches and community groups had a responsibility to the poor. Gaynor was a generous giver of both his time and his money. He was relentless in his efforts.

Gaynor and Barb were easy to love. He was quick to pass on a joke by email. He laughed hardily, and he loved his Lord. Because of his generous spirit, people were drawn to him.

As I think of the road ahead, it seems so hard. Gaynor was the heart of the Salvation Army, and we shall sorely miss him as they will miss his hard work at the First Baptist Church. But as Gaynor was apt to say when the going was tough, “We had better put on our big boy pants and get started.” Gaynor, tonight those big boy pants don’t seem to fit like they used to do.

Well-written R.E.A article serves as reminder of good people, tough times

I just wanted to say again how much I enjoy “our hometown paper” and especially the well-written piece by Chuck Stinnett on the R.E.A.

Clarence Feix was my next door neighbor when I was growing up, and it was good to again think of his wife Ruth and daughter Ann.

We take all our conveniences so much for granted, and it is good to be reminded of how hard life was not too long ago!

Educate yourself on policies, ideas and then make sure to cast ballot

The Nov. 6 election is of vital importance.

With our country struggling to emerge from recession, a downturn that significantly impacted Henderson County and from which we are still trying to recover, Tuesday’s results could have far-reaching ramifications that will extend even beyond the terms of the candidates who win.

For that reason, the Henderson-Henderson County Chamber of Commerce board of directors and the nearly 550 businesses it represents urge you to exercise your constitutional right to vote.

Casting your ballot is the best and truest way to assure the election of responsive, thoughtful and efficient government.

The Chamber urges you to research the policies and ideas of the candidates, so that your vote is an informed one. As an association of local businesses, we also urge you to vote for candidates who best understand the importance of Henderson’s private sector economy in the future of our community.

The 1,000-plus businesses located here and the thousands more people they employ require an economic and regulatory environment that encourages them and cooperates with them. They need a government that carefully balances the need for tax revenue to fund public services with the basic goal of all private enterprises — to profit and prosper.

Don’t let Henderson get left behind. Don’t miss the chance to help secure our future. Vote on Nov. 6.

The writer is president of the Henderson-Henderson County Chamber of Commerce.

Commissioner takes issue with letter

Please allow me to make a few corrections to the letter that was printed on Thursday written by Robby Mills.

Police cruisers: The truth is three commissioners were going to give the Louisville dealer the contract even when the bid said all specifications must be met. One commissioner attempted to make a motion to throw out the “must meet the specifications” part of the bid, and the other two were ready to vote along with him, until I said it was wrong to throw out the “must meet the specifications” part of the bid. Then Randall Redding said it would be wrong, and they changed their minds and voted with me to give the bid to Dempewolf, and that is the truth.

Go to the Internet and look at the Aug. 28 commission meeting. It’s all on tape. The tape will speak for itself; it’s not running for re-election.

Sometimes there is a thin line between fact and fantasy during election time. I hope this helps clarify and bring the facts to light in this situation.

Romney is both accomplished, decent beginning with his tenure as boss of Bain Capital.

Of course, we have people like Alan Blinder, a Princeton economics professor, who wrote in an Oct. 1 Wall Street Journal op-ed that you sure don’t want a former CEO as president because the job is so different from being a political leader. That view and other observations in the piece tell me you sure don’t want an economics professor addressing such matters, because he doesn’t know what he is talking about. You want someone like John Kotter, a scholar of leadership I encountered in a 1980s classroom when he was a professor at the Harvard Business School.

Kotter understands how some approaches spell success whether the leadership role is in private enterprise or public service. Rather than count on my memory, I searched online for his thoughts, finding a quote that sums up what I recall as a central point of his: “Leaders establish the vision for the future and set the strategy for getting there; they cause change. They motivate and inspire others to go in the right direction and they, along with everyone else, sacrifice to get there.”

As the CEO of Bain Capital, Romney ran one of the most successful private equity companies in America and one that is still earning gobs of money for a slew of investors, among them public employee unions all over the country. He helped launch such thriving enterprises as Domino’s Pizza and Staples. He did not do all that without vision, strategy and inspiring others.

Romney, of course, has proved himself in public service as well. He took over management of the 2002 Winter Olympics when it was $379 million in the hole, converting that plight into a surplus originally put at $56 million and then recalculated at $100 million. Later, as the Republican governor of Massachusetts, he converted major deficits into surpluses and helped lead the state from 47th of all states in job growth to 28th, all the time negotiating with a legislature 80 percent Democratic.

Obama, as we know, was a community organizer, and I do not mean to make fun of that. I want to note instead how Romney as a Mormon bishop was also a community leader, working unremittingly to help his flock. This man’s utter, unquestionable kindness, his commitment to lending a hand, his charitable giving and his self-sacrifice all point to exceptional character.

Disregard the dirty, dishonest campaign ads making Romney out to be a rat in candidate’s clothing. He is actually an accomplished leader wrapped in decency.

Final week reveals new campaign truths debate whether emergency management should be shifted from the federal government to the states.

“Absolutely,” Romney said. “Every time you have an occasion to take something from the federal government and send it back to the states, that’s the right direction. And if you can go even further and send it back to the private sector, that’s even better.” Romney didn’t call for eliminating FEMA, but shrinking it, big time.

Republicans in Congress have reportedly cut FEMA grants for disaster preparedness by 43 percent in the last two years, The New York Times noted in an editorial headlined: “A Big Storm Requires Big Government.” Romney’s running mate, Rep. Paul Ryan, has spearheaded FEMA cuts. Yet, when natural disaster hits, we have seen all states, including those governed by conservative Republicans, need and seek federal help.

Perhaps even more calamitous to Romney’s presidential hopes, which seemed strong and under control until just days ago, was dropped upon Team Romney not by the hand of a deity but the mouth of their standard bearer.

But apparently desperate to assure that must-win Ohio doesn’t slip away, Romney launched an attack featuring America’s automotive icon — the Jeep. But it backfired like a hand-cranked Model T. And Ohioans saw Romney was clearly distorting knowable truth.

In aptly named Defiance, Ohio, Romney said last Thursday: “I saw a story today that one of the great manufacturers in this state, Jeep, now owned by Italians, is thinking of moving all production to China.”

Chrysler, which makes the Jeep and is now owned by Fiat, issued an extraordinary statement calling Romney’s contention “fantasies.” Explaining why it was misleading to suggest jobs were being shifted to China, Chrysler said it was merely resuming the Jeep’s production in China. Chrysler began producing Jeeps in China in 1984 and stopped it in 2009, before Fiat bought the company. Chrysler also has similar joint production ventures that build Jeeps in Egypt and Venezuela.

This final week, according to Romney’s master plan, was to have seen a kinder, gentler Romney wooing the independent women voters in the swing state suburbs by looking presidential.

What we saw on our screens was President Barack Obama doing his job as commander-in-chief, ordering all federal agencies to cut red tape and speed help to storm victims and local officials. Also doing his job as consoler-in-chief, praising heroic first responders and patriotically celebrating the spirit of America at its best.

We saw, on our screens, Obama at his presidential best.

Officials: Slain kids begged for lives

By Sara Burnett and Don Babwin
Associated Press

NAPERVILLE, Ill. — A suburban Chicago woman ordered her 7-year-old son and a kindergarten she was baby-sitting to kneel on a bedroom floor and pray, then stabbed them both dozens of times as they begged for their lives, authorities said Thursday.

Officers who forced their way inside the locked apartment hours later found blood-spattered walls and the children's bodies in a master bedroom, prosecutors said.

The Naperville police chief said it was the most gruesome sight he'd seen in his three decades on the job.

Elzbieta Plackowska, a 40-year-old immigrant from Poland, offered numerous explanations for the violence, including that she was battling the devil and trying to rid the children of evil, DuPage County State's Attorney Robert Berlin said. But she eventually told investigators she stabbed the children and slashed their throats Tuesday night because she was angry that her husband, a truck driver, was often away.

"She told the detectives that she thought by killing (her son) Justin she would make her husband hurt the way she hurt in their relationship," Berlin said.

"I don't understand anything that's going on," said Tim Hooper, 28, who lives in the same condominium complex as the Plackowska family and would sometimes work out with an older son. "This is so out of the blue."

Pennsylvania Attorney General Linda Kelly announces new criminal charges Thursday related to an ongoing child sex crimes investigation against former Penn State President Graham Spanier and added charges against two former underlings, Timothy Curley and Gary Schultz.

Ex-Penn State president charged in Sandusky case

By Mark Sciforo
Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. — The "conspiracy of silence" that protected Jerry Sandusky extended all the way to the top at Penn State, prosecutors said Thursday as they charged former university President Graham Spanier with hushing up child sexual abuse allegations against the former assistant football coach.

Prosecutors also added counts against two of Spanier's former underlings, Tim Curley and Gary Schultz, who already were charged with lying to a grand jury.

"This was not a mistake by these men. This was not an oversight. It was not misjudgment on their part," said state Attorney General Linda Kelly. "This was a conspiracy of silence by top officials to actively conceal the truth."

Spanier's lawyers issued a statement that asserted his innocence and described the new charges as an attempt by Gov. Tom Corbett to divert attention from the three-year investigation that began under his watch as attorney general.

"These charges are the work of a vindictive and politically motivated governor working through an unelected attorney general ... whom he appointed to do his bidding," the four defense lawyers wrote.

Corbett spokesman Kevin Harley said the defense statement "sounds like the ranting of a desperate man who just got indicted."

Curley's lawyer Caroline Roberto said he was innocent of all charges, as he has asserted in the past. She said the new documents were being reviewed and would have a more comprehensive comment later. Schultz also has maintained his innocence.

At a Capitol news conference, Kelly said all three men "knowingly testified falsely and failed to provide important information and evidence."

Spanier was charged with perjury, obstruction, endangering the welfare of children, failure to properly report suspected abuse and conspiracy. Curley and Schultz face new charges of endangering the welfare of children, obstruction and conspiracy.

The charges were filed with a suburban Harrisburg district judge, whose office said Curley and Schultz were expected to be arraigned this afternoon and Spanier tentatively scheduled to appear Wednesday. They came nearly a year to the day that Sandusky was arrested.

RHODE ISLAND

State sues Schilling over loan guarantee

PROVIDENCE — Rhode Island's economic development agency on Thursday sued former Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling and some of its former officials, saying they committed fraud and other acts that misled the state into approving a $75 million loan guarantee to his failed video game company.

The suit was filed in Rhode Island Superior Court four months after 38 Studios filed for bankruptcy following a spectacular collapse that has likely left the state on the hook for as much as $100 million.

Among other things, the lawsuit claims that executives at 38 Studios, as well as former Economic Development Corp. Executive Director Keith Stokes and others, knew the company would run out of money by 2012, but concealed that from the EDC board, which made the final decision on whether to back the deal.

UTAH

Alcohol imbibing on the upswing in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — In a state known for its teetotalers, imbibing is on the upswing in Utah — with drinkers downing nearly a third more liquor than they did six years ago.

Although key members of the Mormon-dominated Legislature for years have tried to control consumption by restricting the number of alcohol licenses available to restaurants, bars and clubs, an inevitable demographic change and the push for more economic development could help reshape that longtime policy. State GOP Sen. John Valentine, of Orem, who authors most of the important liquor-related legislation in Utah, is planning to introduce a bill in the upcoming session that would free up more liquor licenses by allowing chain restaurants to obtain a single "master" license for all their locations.

Under current law, each outlet must have a liquor permit, tying up dozens of licenses and creating shortages, which lawmakers generally have been unwilling to remedy, citing concerns about drunk driving, underage drinking and overconsumption.

More than 80 percent of legislators are members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which teaches its members to refrain from drinking alcohol.

ALABAMA

School names first woman president

TUSCALOOSA — The University of Alabama's board of trustees voted Thursday to appoint the first permanent woman president in the school's 181-year history.

The board met in an executive session for about an hour before naming current Provost Judy L. Bonner, 65. She's the older sister of U.S. Rep. Jo Bonner, R-Mobile, and served as interim president before outgoing President Guy Bailey took over in early September.

A native of rural Wilcox County, Bonner has two degrees from Alabama and said she was honored to be its first female chief executive. She said she never dreamed of going anywhere else for her undergraduate degree.

"I love the University of Alabama," said Bonner, who has advanced degrees from Alabama and Ohio State University.

SYRIA

78 soldiers killed in rebel attacks

Syrian rebels killed 78 soldiers Thursday, about half of them in attacks on military checkpoints in the north just hours after a wave of bombings hit the Damascus area, activists said.

The unusually high toll for regime forces came after days of intense air bombardment of rebel positions around the country that killed hundreds more.

Anti-regime activists say President Bashar Assad's regime has been making even heavier use than before of airstrikes to try to win back territory rebels have captured.

After many rounds of failed diplomatic efforts to ease the Syrian crisis, the U.S. is making a push to unite the opposition, which is dominated by exiles widely seen as ineffective and out of touch with rebel fighters on the ground.

A total of 182 people were killed on Thursday, according to the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights. Of those, 104 were civilians and rebel fighters and 78 were soldiers.

NORTHERN IRELAND

IRA suspected in prison guard killing

DUBLIN — Suspected IRA die-hards killed a Northern Ireland prison officer Thursday in a gun ambush as he drove to work, the first killing of a prison guard in nearly two decades in the British territory.

Police said a gunman in a passing car shot David Black, 52, several times as he drove onto the M1 motorway southwest of Belfast. His car plummeted down a grassy embankment into a ditch.

Police found the attackers' suspected getaway car burned out in the nearby town of Lurgan, a power base for two IRA factions opposed to Northern Ireland's peace process, the Real IRA and Continuity IRA. They said the car had Dublin license plates.

No group claimed responsibility. Politicians and police commanders said IRA militants were inevitably to blame and pilloried the various IRA splinter groups still in existence as politically pointless.

RUSSIA

Putin's absence sets off speculation

MOSCOW — What ails Vladimir Putin?

The Russian leader whose image of physical vigor is key to his success has canceled several foreign trips in recent weeks, postponed his annual live televised question-and-answer session with average Russians, and has rarely left his suburban residence outside Moscow.

A respected Russian newspaper claimed Thursday that a publicity stunt during which Putin tried to lead cranes on their migratory paths in a motorized hang-glider aggravated an old injury.

Putin's office denies it was the flight with cranes, insists it is just a pulled muscle and spins the situation, saying that athletes often get banged up. Besides, it says, Putin's avoiding the Kremlin office so he doesn't tie up Moscow traffic with his motorcade.

So what's really wrong? Combine the old Russian custom of keeping a leader's health problems secret with a massive PR apparatus that micromanages information about Putin to the nth degree and what do you get? A lot of speculation.

Syrians wary of U.S. push to overhaul opposition

By Zeina Karam and Karin Laub
Associated Press

BEIRUT — Members of Syria's opposition-in-exile bristled Thursday at the Obama administration's suggestion that Washington will handpick more representative leaders at a crucial conference in Qatar next week.

The new U.S. push appears aimed at creating a unified leadership that could work more closely with the West. But there are signs of resistance among deeply fractured opposition groups wary of attempts by foreign backers to dictate strategy in the civil war against President Bashar Assad.

"This direct tutelage and these dictates are not acceptable to the Syrian people anymore," said Zuhair Salem, the London-based spokesman for Syria's banned Muslim Brotherhood opposition group. The Brotherhood is part of the main political opposition group, the Syrian National Council, which is dominated by exiles.

Syrians and the U.S. administration have grown increasingly frustrated as the opposition proved unwilling or unable to coalesce. The U.S. and its allies have long bemoaned the lack of a cohesive leadership, and there is little doubt that this has held back more robust foreign aid and involvement to bolster the opposition in its fight.

With the battle for control of Syria almost certainly to be decided on the battlefield, the political opposition led by exiles is being further sidelined.

On Wednesday, the Obama administration said it would push for a major shake-up in the opposition leadership so that it better represents the fighters risking their lives on the front lines. At least 36,000 people have been killed since the uprising began 19 months ago, according to anti-regime activists.

It was a signal that Syria's political opposition is increasingly irrelevant, as it's become clearer that the conflict will be decided by fighters.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said the administration was suggesting names and organizations that should feature prominently in any new rebel leadership that is to emerge from a four-day conference starting Sunday in Doha, the capital of Qatar.

Israel confirms deputy's '88 killing

By Aron Heller
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel acknowledged Thursday it killed Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's deputy in a 1988 raid in Tunisia, lifting a nearly 25-year veil of secrecy and allowing a rare glimpse into the shadowy world of its secret operations.

One of the commandos was disguised as a woman on a romantic vacation, and one of the weapons was hidden in a box of chocolates.

Khalil al-Wazir, who was better known by his nom de guerre Abu Jihad, founded Fatah, the dominant faction in the Palestine Liberation Organization, with Arafat and was blamed for a series of deadly attacks against Israelis.

Two of those involved in the operation that killed al-Wazir now hold high political office in Israel — Defense Minister Ehud Barak and Vice Premier Moshe Yaalon. At the time, Barak was deputy military chief, and Yaalon was head of the elite commando unit Sayeret Matkal. Their precise roles in the operation were not divulged, and both men's offices declined comment.

Israel has long been suspected of assassinating al-Wazir. But only now has the country's military censor cleared the Yediot Ahronot daily to publish the information, including an interview with the commando who killed him, at least 12 years after the newspaper obtained the information.

novice, apprentice, proficient and distinguished? Which schools met the state average, goals and/or need improvement, and how was that determined? Can this year's overall results be compared to last year's overall results? What will the consequences be for schools that don't make the grade?

We'll do our best to touch on each of these issues. But for more detailed responses, readers are encouraged to call the Henderson County Schools, Union County Public Schools and the Webster County Schools.

■ First, why the change? Basically, it's because Kentucky's public schools have set their sights on making sure that students are ready for college and/or a career. They want to make sure that students are able to compete in a global economy. And to do that, they had to change how students are graded. In many cases, they had to change what students are tested on, too.

Why? Because this way, Kentucky's students will be held to a national standard of college and career readiness. Right now, Kentucky has the same content standards as 46 other states in math and English/language arts. And standards for science and social studies are currently being developed.

In fact, according to the local school district, Kentucky is the first state to test these new national standards as part of its state accountability system.

Last spring, students took the Kentucky Performance Rating for Educational Progress (K-PREP) in five areas: Reading, math, science, social studies and writing. A good portion of what we are publishing today is based on those tests.

Additionally, high school students took end-of-course exams in Algebra II, English II, biology and social studies or tests that corresponded to those subjects. All sophomores and juniors took the on-demand writing test. These scores are part of the overall scores, too.

■ Second, what does this mean for your children?

Your son or daughter will still be designated as novice, apprentice, proficient and distinguished in the five subject areas. And students will still get to see their scores in each subject area. But they will now be judged based on different categories, and these categories will change depending on whether your child is in elementary, middle or high school. Those categories will also be weighted differently depending on the school level.

The formula is complex, but basically:

In elementary school, students are judged on achievement (30 percent), gap (30 percent) and growth (40 percent).

The gap score comes from looking at proficiency in reading, math, science, social studies and writing.

In the middle school, the categories are achievement (28 percent), gap (28 percent), growth (28 percent) and college/career readiness (16 percent).

At the high school, the categories are achievement, gap, growth, college/career readiness and the graduation rate. Each category is weighted at 20 percent.

■ Third, which schools are met the state average, goals and/or need improvement, and how is that determined?

That's complicated, but basically, schools that are at or above the 90th percentile are labeled distinguished. Schools in the 70th to 89th percentile are proficient. Schools below the 70th percentile are needing improvement.

HENDERSON COUNTY

Take-away points: As a whole, Henderson County Schools earned an overall score of 55.4, meaning the district is classified as needing improvement along with 69 percent of the school districts in Kentucky.

Spottsville, Cairo and East Heights elementary schools are designated as proficient schools in the district. Every other school except North Middle School is labeled as needing improvement.

North Middle is being called a "focus school" in the area of reading for students with disabilities, and in science for African-American students and students with disabilities.

"As always, we will be intensely viewing all of the massive amounts of data associated with this new testing system," said Ginger Carter, director of accountability and assessment.

"By (looking at) the data and digging deeper we will be able to see our district strengths and areas for improvement. The same detailed study will occur for each school."

Carter added that the district has set forth a plan of action that will be unveiled on Nov. 8 when Superintendent Thomas Richey addresses the Henderson-Henderson County Chamber of Commerce and the community. The plan will also appear in The Gleaner on the same day in a special insert.

Meanwhile, here's the breakdown in Henderson County:

(The overall state average for elementary schools is 57.3 points.)

- A.B. Chandler: 60.3 points.
 - Bend Gate: 54.4.
 - Cairo: 68.1.
 - East Heights: 68.
 - Jefferson: 52.3.
 - Niagara: 61.1.
 - South Heights: 52.8.
 - Spottsville: 69.4.
- (The overall state average for middle schools is 53.5.)
- North Middle: 46.1.
 - South Middle: 54.8.

(The overall state average for high schools is 54.8.)

■ Henderson County High School: 55.2.

UNION COUNTY

Take-away points: As a whole, the Union County Public Schools earned an overall score of 50.9, meaning the district is classified as needing improvement along with 69 percent of the school districts in Kentucky.

Morganfield, Sturgis and Uniontown elementary schools are designated as needing improvement. Union County Middle and Union County High schools are labeled as "focus schools."

This means that these schools have not closed the achievement gap in at least one area and will need to focus on closing those gaps. More specific information was not available by press time.

However, elementary level science and social studies are strong points in the district, according to these results.

"The district's growth is encouraging, as it shows more than half of Union County students at every level — elementary, middle and high — making typical or higher annual growth in reading and math," a news release said.

Here's the breakdown in Union County scores:

(The overall state average for elementary schools is 57.3.)

- Morganfield Elementary: 50.4.
 - Sturgis Elementary: 55.1.
 - Uniontown Elementary: 57.7.
- (The overall state average for middle schools is 53.5.)
- Union County Middle School: 49.2.

(The overall state average for high schools is 54.8.)

■ Union County High School: 50.

WEBSTER COUNTY

Take-away points:

Webster County Schools earned an overall score of 54.8, meaning the district is classified as needing improvement along with 69 percent of the school districts in Kentucky.

Slaughters and Clay schools are designated as being proficient at the middle school level, while Dixon, Providence and Sebree are designated as needing improvement at the middle school level. Clay, Dixon, Providence and Slaughters schools are in need of improvement at the elementary level. Webster County High School needs improvement, too. Sebree's elementary level is a "focus school" because of limited English proficiency scores in the area of reading.

"The district realizes there is much work to be done to be considered a progressing district and the work has begun to see those results," the district said in a news release.

Here's the breakdown in Webster County scores: (The overall state average for elementary schools is 57.3.)

- Clay Elementary: 59.
- Dixon Elementary: 56.5.
- Providence Elementary: 50.7.
- Sebree Elementary: 56.
- Slaughters Elementary: 56.7.

(The overall state average for middle schools is 53.5.)

- Clay Elementary: 62.5.
- Dixon Elementary: 49.6.
- Providence Elementary: 49.6.
- Sebree Elementary: 48.3.
- Slaughters Elementary: 62.4.

(The overall state average for high schools is 54.8.)

■ Webster County High School: 54.9.

■ Fourth, can these overall results be compared to last year's overall results?

No. That's because last year, students were being tested on their basic proficiency in math and reading. This year, students are being measured on their readiness for college and a career.

But another reason the scores can't be directly compared is that the scale used to determine student scores is different. Last year, the scale was 0 to 140. This year, the scale is 0 to 100.

■ Fifth, what happens if a school doesn't meet the state goal?

Nothing this year. But in a worst case situation, schools that repeatedly fail to meet state goals can eventually be taken over by another entity, restaffed, or closed, among other things.

HOWELL
from 1A

"After he retired, he really got involved in the community, especially the Salvation Army," Logan said. "He was the Salvation Army," serving on the local Advisory Board for 14 years, including as chairman.

Salvation Army Major Peggy Mullins said she and her husband, Major Jerry, were "heartbroken."

"He did things I've never seen board members do in other places," she declared.

A former bookkeeper at the local Salvation Army told Peggy Mullins that he remembered "many times when Gaynor would write a check so we would make payroll."

"He never took credit" for such work, she said. "He was behind the scenes."

"I worked with him (on the Salvation Army board) for 11 years, and I've never seen a more selfless man who took on more responsibility that Gaynor Howell," retired educator Roy Pullam said.

"Right now, he was running the canned food drive," Pullam said. "He was the head of the emergency committee (that organized responses to disasters). He was the head of bell-ringing," when volunteers and other workers solicit donations to the needy from shoppers during the weeks leading up to Christmas.

In the summer, he co-chaired the Salvation Army's annual golf scramble fundraiser; in December, he and his wife hosted the Advisory's Board Christmas luncheon at their home.

"He was our best giver," Pullam said. "He was a person you could always count on. I would call him the heart of the Salvation Army."

"He had a number of friends (from First Baptist Church) who were on the board because of Gaynor and who worked hard because of Gaynor," he said. "He made us all rise a little bit above ourselves."

The local Salvation Army has withstood the loss of what Pullam called "pillars" with the recent deaths of some longtime board members.

"What would the Salvation Army be without Ron Chapman getting us a new building with the help of Charlie Shade? And Don Nunley, who went on all those emergencies? And now Gaynor?" he said.

ART HOP
from 1A

His work will include some abstract paintings based in landscape and architecture, as well as an unlikely subject.

Paintings of waves.

"It's pretty strange for me to be painting waves," Hittner said, "because my whole life I have been scared to death of that ocean."

Not the sharks or other creatures contained within, but the sheer power of the ocean water.

"Maybe these paintings I've done have reduced it in size," he said, explaining that the inspiration came from a recent trip to Charleston and time spent sitting on the beach, watching the water. "It's been a fun subject to paint."

As for the Art Hop Gallery Show & Sale, as in the previous three events, participants will be able to come downtown from 5 to 9 p.m. to visit the different galleries set up in existing businesses and available buildings and talk with the artists.

This year, 37 artists will be participating in nine different locations.

Here are the temporary gallery locations and artists who will be exhibiting in those spaces:

- 223½ Second St. (above Belle Boutique) — Hittner.
- RiverBend Gallery, The Soaper Building, Second Street entrance — Ginger Adams, Janice Greene, Julie

McClellan, Gregory Powell, Cynthia Watson and Dianne Wham.

■ The Soaper Building, 141 N. Main St. — Bippus Frames, Lucy Felty, Kelly Gilbert, Alan Hedgespeth, April Robinson, Landis Thompson, Bob Zasadny and Todd Derr.

■ King, Deep and Branaman, 127 N. Main St. — Ann Craddock Brunner and Katie Lowing.

■ Balfour Rings & Things, 121 N. Main St. — Jesika Ellis, Allena Rossio and Jessica Crowley.

■ Image One Studio, 114 N. Main St. — 6 Painted Ladies, Sandy Berry, Iris Gentry, Cathe Hedgespeth, Marka Kroeger, Jan Frazier and Susie Rideout.

■ Curt Hamilton Law, 110 N. Main St. — TJ Byrd, Leann Traylor Scott and Linda Vincent.

■ Morton Law, 126 N. Main St. — Laine Benthall, Julie Byczynski, Stephen Chandler, Leeza Dukes, Jamie Rasure and John Schrecker.

■ Planters Coffeehouse, 130 N. Main St. — Kathy Lawson, Emily Mabee and Betty Smithhart.

■ Ohio Valley Art League, a local visual arts organization, will also have its permanent gallery open during the art hop.

■ OVAL Gallery @ The Bank of Henderson, located 201 N. Main St., is currently exhibiting its second annual "Christmas Card Competition."

East Coast residents return home to destruction

Associated Press

POINT PLEASANT BEACH, N.J. — Bill Goldberg's first reaction upon entering his flood-damaged home in this popular Jersey Shore resort community was unprintable.

His second was that life as he knew it had just been turned upside down — along with his refrigerator, freezer, and kitchen and dining room furniture.

"Now it's a matter of figuring out whether I have anything left," he said Thursday, as he scraped a thick layer of mud from his home.

Similar scenes were playing out up and down the Jersey Shore and along New York's beachfront communities as residents were allowed back into their neighborhoods for the first time since Hurricane Sandy hit Monday night. Some were relieved to find only minor damage; others were wiped out.

"A lot of tears are being shed today," said Dennis Cucci, whose home near the ocean in Point Pleasant Beach sustained heavy damage. "It's absolutely mind-boggling."

"The worst part is the mental damage from not knowing what comes next," he said. "We're ready to start doing something, but what? What do you do first? When should you start doing it? Where can you put damaged stuff? When can you put it there? We're just waiting for someone to say something."

Band to perform halftime at playoff

The Henderson County High School Colonel's Brigade and Guard will perform at halftime of tonight's home football game.

However, due to scheduling conflicts, it will not be marching to its Circus of Dreams show, according to assistant band director Adam Thomas.

The public is invited.

Presidential politics reignites in Sandy's wake

By Nedra Pickler and Steve Peoples
Associated Press

ROANOKE, Va. — Presidential politics reignited in the wake of natural disaster Thursday, with the candidates beginning their full-throttle closing arguments with new vigor on the same pocketbook concerns that have dominated the campaign from the start.

President Barack Obama, Republican rival Mitt Romney, their wives and running mates were blitzing across the country in the busiest day of campaign events yet. The six principals were hitting seven swing states that will help determine on Tuesday which man will occupy the White House for the next four years.

After avoiding criticism of Obama by name for a full day after Superstorm Sandy, Romney aides said Thursday it was game on. That was evident as Romney opened a new criticism of Obama's suggestion that he would create a secretary of business.

"We don't need a secretary of business to understand business, we need a president who understands business, and I do," he said in Roanoke, Va. Romney's crowd seemed as charged as he was, interrupting with frequent whoops of applause and chants of "Five more days!"

Obama also focused on the economy, arguing that Romney is not the agent of change he is trying to portray himself as and asking for four more years to complete his work. His closing argument stump speech is heavy on nostalgia hearkening back to his hopeful 2008 campaign and even the days when President Bill Clinton led Americans to better economic times.

"By the end Bill Clinton's second term America had created 23 million new jobs, and incomes were up and poverty was down and our deficit became the biggest surplus in our history," Obama said in Green Bay, Wis. "So Wisconsin, we know the ideas that work."

No one was hitting the ground harder in the final days than Clinton, who acted as a surrogate campaigner in chief while Obama was off the trail and had four stops scheduled Thursday in Wisconsin and Ohio. Clinton and Obama planned to appear together along with singer Dave Matthews on Saturday night in Bristow, Va.

Thursday's quickened campaign pace forced a crisscross of overlapping paths. Obama and Romney's running mate were trading places later in the day, with the president flying from Las Vegas to Colorado and Paul Ryan making the opposite journey. Meanwhile, Ann Romney and Clinton were circling each other across battleground Ohio, with just about 25 miles between them for appearances planned at the same time Thursday evening near Akron. Both also planned events less than 50 miles apart in central Ohio.

Vice President Joe Biden took time out from morning campaigning in Iowa to tape the "Top Ten" list to air on the David Letterman show Thursday night.

Obama's campaign is seeking to make up for the time lost to Sandy with a heavy travel itinerary in the coming days, including rallies Thursday in Wisconsin, Nevada and Colorado. Before traveling to Wisconsin, Obama held a storm briefing at the White House with Federal Emergency Management Agency Administrator Craig Fugate and other administration officials, and the White House said Obama would stay in touch with Fugate and local officials affected by the storm throughout the day.

A heckler shouting that climate change caused Sandy interrupted Romney's afternoon rally in Doswell, Va., but he was quickly drowned out by Romney's supporters and pushed out of the room by security. Romney resumed speaking without addressing the issue.

Romney's aides concede that the storm stalled his momentum to the finish line but insist that internal polling shows they have leads in battleground states like Virginia, Florida, Colorado and North Carolina. But their specific path to 270 electoral votes is still unclear without Ohio or Wisconsin, where aides did not offer the same measure of confidence on Thursday.

Romney is set to campaign in both states in the coming days.

FROM THE COVER

HOUSE from 1A

House Democrat voted in 2010 to increase taxes on small business by $371 million, which would have killed jobs had it been enacted into law. I will not vote to raise taxes on Kentuckians.

We must also refuse to implement Obamacare in Kentucky. Gov. (Steve) Beshear has decreed that Kentucky will take part in this job-killing law. However, we can opt-out, but that will not happen so long as my opponent and his party control the House. If Kentucky participates in Obamacare and our neighboring states do not, we will see jobs move to those states, which will not be burdened by the employer mandate/tax, while Medicaid patients move into Kentucky to take advantage of Medicaid expansion. This could break Kentucky.

We also need to ensure we educate our children for college and the workforce. There were 600,000 unfilled high-tech jobs last year due to an unqualified labor force nationwide. We should promote shop classes and other applied technology courses in our schools and develop students who are proficient both in academics and in a hard, marketable job skill or trade.

2. Debt. Depending on the metric, Kentucky ranks fourth or fifth worst nationwide in debt. The state employee pension fund was underfunded by $1 billion in 2000. It is now underfunded by $33.5 billion. Our leadership in Frankfort has failed us, padding their pensions in 2005 (HB 299), while taking money from the pension fund and spending it elsewhere. My opponent voted for that bill. We can fix the problem by first ending legislative pensions. Part time politicians don't need pensions and getting rid of them gives legislators credibility to fix the problem. Second, we need to look at what states like New Jersey and Rhode Island have done to fix similar problems. If we do not fix this now, we run the risk of having to choose between bad and worse decisions later.

Our general debt is in the $8 billion range. The Senate passed SB 1 this past session, which would have capped the amount of debt that could be incurred each year. House Democrats refused to allow a vote on the bill. My opponent has been Vice-Chair of the Appropriations Committee and is, therefore, directly responsible for Kentucky's debt problem. We cannot expect the folks who created our debt problem to fix it. I will be responsible with the money of the people of Kentucky and ensure that we live within our means. Recognizing the need for a new representative in this seat, the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce PAC has endorsed me over my 18-year incumbent opponent.

3. Pro-Life Legislation. Kentucky is a pro-life state and we need to pass pro-life legislation. For the past several years, pro-life bills have passed overwhelmingly in the Republican Senate and died in the Democratic-led House. House leadership places these bills in the Health and Welfare Committee for the purpose of killing them. My opponent, John Arnold, is on this committee and has voted against several pro-life bills. 2011, he voted against HB 215, which would have banned abortions after 20 weeks (with exceptions), which is the time at which unborn babies begin to feel pain. He also voted against HB 243, which would have addressed out-of-state minors coming to Kentucky to obtain abortions without their parents' permission. At the same Committee meeting, he walked out of the room and refused to vote on pro-life bills HB 374 and 390. In 2008, Mr. Arnold walked out of the room so he would not have to vote on SB 40, the ultrasound bill. Finally, Mr. Arnold refused to vote on SB 121 in 1998, which banned the widely-condemned "partial birth abortion" procedure.

I will support pro-life legislation and have been endorsed by Kentucky Right to Life. I am on the board of directors of a pregnancy center, the mission of which is to assist women facing difficult pregnancies, through parenting classes, counseling, and the provision of needed items, such as diapers and formula.

As we look ahead to Kentucky's future, there are three main priorities that will decide just how successful we can be: education, economic development, and the state's budget. They stand together like a three-legged stool. If just one weakens, the others are all but guaranteed to fall as well.

For much of Kentucky's early history, education did not get the attention it deserved, and the results were predictable. That began to change significantly more than two decades ago, and the ground we have covered in about a generation has been nothing short of remarkable. Fourth grade reading scores, for example, are now in the top 10 nationally among the states, and eighth grade science scores have long beat the national average. In just the last five years the number of high school students taking — and passing — the difficult Advanced Placement courses, which provide college credit, has doubled. GED classes are booming, and enrollments at our universities regularly set new records each fall.

The challenge ahead is to build on these gains. Finding additional money is crucial, of course, but so is raising the high school dropout age, something more than 30 states have already done. We need to find ways to help more students be college ready, both academically and financially. I have supported efforts in the past to help this along — such as setting aside more of the state's proceeds from the lottery for scholarships and financial aid — and will work to do more.

A thriving education system is the foundation for growing our economy. Since 2009 when my colleagues in the General Assembly and I overhauled the state's tax incentives, we have seen a renewed interest in the Commonwealth. Last year alone about 70 auto-related companies either located here or expanded their operations.

Our business climate, as measured by Forbes magazine, has shot up 19 spots since 2008, and only a handful of states have seen more startup companies get under way in recent months. Just a few weeks ago, a USA Today article showed Kentucky's personal income growth has far outpaced the national average since 2007.

Like education, the focus here in the months ahead needs to be building on our past success. As Governor Beshear's blue-ribbon task force finalizes its work, its suggestions will undoubtedly include ways to make our tax system even more favorable to those looking to add jobs in Kentucky.

Agriculture has been a bright spot economically in recent years, with commodity sales nearing $5 billion a year. It is imperative we take steps to continue helping farmers diversify and get their products to the market.

That leads us to the state budget, a subject I know well as the long-time Chairman of the Subcommittee on Economic Development, Tourism, Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. I have seen firsthand how tough the economic climate of the last five years has been on the budget. As Governor Beshear said in an earlier address to the General Assembly, the cupboard wasn't just bare; it was gone. Since his tenure began, cuts have totaled about $1.6 million.

Even so, Kentucky has been relatively fortunate when compared to other states. There have been no layoffs of teachers or state employees, and as I mentioned, we have been able to shield the classroom as well as critical health and human services. At the same time, we have overhauled our penal code and Medicaid helping us save hundreds of millions of dollars without jeopardizing our health or public safety.

As a key member of the budget committee, I am poised to help our region share in these gains in the years ahead. I'm proud of the work we have done, but I know all too well that there is still much we can do.

Shelton is CMA's Entertainer of Year

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn.— It was couples night at the Country Music Association Awards as Blake Shelton and Miranda Lambert capped an emotional evening with Shelton's first entertainer of the year award.

"The Voice" star won a leading three awards, including his third straight male vocalist of the year award. Lambert won female vocalist of the year, and the couple shared song of the year for their heart-rending collaboration "Over You."

Lambert openly wept on stage in one of the more emotional CMA moments in recent memory as her husband recounted for the ABC television audience how his late father Dick spurred the couple to write the heart-rending song the loss of his brother Richie.

"My dad always told me, 'Son, you should write a song about your brother,'" Shelton said. "I lost my dad in January, and it's so amazing to me that tonight, even after he's gone, he's still right. I just needed the right person to write this song with and the right person to sing it."

Shelton and Lambert weren't the only couple with surprising wins. Little Big Town, a quartet that includes couple Karen Fairchild and Jimi Westbrook, took home vocal group and single of the year for "Pontoon." And Thompson Square's Shawna and Keifer Thompson won vocal duo of the year, ending Sugarland's five-year run in that category.

"Y'all, this has been a 13-year journey," Karen Fairchild said as members of the group fist-pumped, jumped up and down and shouted on stage. "We're living proof that if you work really hard and chase your dream, all the good stuff happens and it follows you. Nashville, you made us your band. Thank you for letting us do this."

Like fellow outsiders LBT, Eric Church felt the love from the CMA's voters for the first time. He won the prestigious album of the year for his breakthrough record "Chief," signaling his complete acceptance by the country music community.

"I spent a lot of my career wondering where I fit in — too country, too rock," Church told the crowd. "I want to thank you guys for giving me somewhere to hang my hat tonight."

The North Carolina native was this year's leading nominee, breaking through in prestigious categories for the first time. Yet no one was more surprised than Church, who said he certainly had no expectation of winning.

— businessmen, farmers, professionals, public officials and others from Henderson County.

Fulcher, arguably the most successful agent in the Southern Farm Bureau Insurance organization, had been contemplating a means for charitable giving when he was inspired by two of the most influential community fundraisers of the past generation: Dear and Dr. John Logan.

"Walt Dear challenged me to raise $300,000," Fulcher said, while Logan encouraged him to support the Colonels 2 College program that provides scholarships at Henderson Community College to Henderson County High School graduates who fulfill certain requirements.

Fulcher said he committed the past 90 days to convincing fellow professionals to fund the Community Foundation of Henderson to support such efforts — including inspiring Southern Farm Bureau CEO Joey Stroble of Jackson, Miss., to commit $25,000 toward the effort.

"That helped launch the Community Foundation of Henderson into the realm of reality," Scott Davis, chairman and CEO of Ohio Valley Financial Group, said.

Fulcher said his goal has been not only to inspire donations from what began as a dozen individuals yet mushroomed in number beyond that, but to encourage a community of "ambassadors"

■ Dunbar tops HCHS in soccer Final Four

LEXINGTON— A span of 24 seconds ended Henderson County's season in the semifinals of the KHSAA state soccer tournament.

Lexington Dunbar (25-3) scored back-to-back goals in the 31st minute to move into Saturday's championship game.

"Luck," Dunbar coach Todd Bretz said of the key to that 24-second stretch of action that gave his team a 2-0 win. "We were very fortunate all night. They had two off the post in the second half. We had two shots go in. It's a cruel game that way some times."

Henderson County coach Benson Pryor agreed with Bretz's assessment. "We were a little bit unlucky all night. We hit the crossbar three times. We had passes that they were able to just get a toe on."

"Six inches on any of those shots, and it's a different game," Bretz said.

Henderson County had its first near miss in the 25th minute when Nick Gregory's free kick hit the crossbar. "I thought that was in. If we go up 1-0, who knows what happens," Pryor said.

Shaquille Guiseppi broke the scoreless tie at the 31:27 mark ending a string of Bulldog passes, the last a pass over the top by Riley Calhoun.

"We haven't given up a goal like that in a long time," Pryor said.

With momentum on its side, Dunbar struck again at 31:51 as Matthew Spanyer sent the ball into Calhoun, who nailed the goal home.

Henderson County's James Bickers (19) heads the ball past Lexington Dunbar's Nick Dimeo (7) during their state soccer tournament Final Four semifinal game in Lexington on Thursday night. The Colonels lost 2-0 to the host Bulldogs.

"We were still a little shellshocked from giving up the first goal. We had two defensive breakdowns and gave up two goals," Pryor said. "That's what happens at this stage in the season when you make mistakes."

The Colonels kept attacking in the second half and had a couple of near scoring opportunities late in the match. Miquel Velazquez put a shot just over the goal in the 67th minute. James Bickers, moved up from the defense, turned on a pass from Kaelin Hildreth and hit the crossbar.

"I thought we outplayed them in the second half, but that may have been the result of them becoming a little more defensive," Pryor said. "Dunbar is a very good, well coached team."

"Henderson County has a fantastic team. They have one of the most potent offenses I've seen in a long time," Bretz said.

Dunbar, which won the last of its three state championships in 2005, will face Louisville St. Xavier in Saturday's championship match. St. Xavier, which has won four of the last five titles including last year's, defeated Boone County 2-0 to improve its record to 26-0-2.

Following the game, Bickers and Velazquez were named to the all-tournament team representing Henderson County, which finished its season with a 20-4-2 record.

Cols to be shorthanded for playoff opener

■ Wilke out, fellow defensive leader Pulliam is questionable

By Kevin Patton
kpatton@thegleaner.com

Henderson County may be without two of its defensive leaders as it opens postseason play tonight against Fern Creek.

Senior inside linebacker Cade Wilke will miss the first-round game of the 6-A playoffs and senior nose guard Tray Pulliam is questionable.

Wilke, who suffered a stinger during Friday's 49-21 win over Owensboro, had another in Tuesday's practice and will have to sit out tonight's game.

Pulliam missed most of last week's game with a sprained ankle. His availability will be a game-time decision.

Wilke played last week, mostly just on defense, and had put up big numbers in the win with 20 tackles.

"That's the highest number of tackles of any player since I've coached here," said Henderson County coach Clay Clevenger, who began charting defensive stats in his second season (2008). "He had 13 or 14 tackles in the first half alone."

On a night when fellow senior Keileen Chappell rushed for a career-high 218 yards, Wilke's performance on defense was just as noteworthy.

"Twenty tackles is equally impressive to me as 218 yards," Clevenger said.

The team's leading tackler on the season, Wilke surpassed the 100-tackle mark for the second straight season. "He's close to 300 tackles for his career. To me, that's the equivalent of being a 3,000-yard rusher," Clevenger said.

Sophomore Richard Carter, who starts at the other inside linebacker, also had 15 tackles in the game. Pulliam's absence contributed to the high number of tackles by the linebackers. "Tray usually eats up a lot of those tackles," said Clevenger, who would like to see a similar defensive performance tonight.

"That was one of the more physical games we've played. We need to swarm to the football. We did a good job of that against Owensboro," he said.

Records: Henderson Co. 8-2; Fern Creek 2-8

In Wilke's absence, Chappell will return to being a two-way starter. Mason Douglas could also see time at linebacker and Alex Gruebel could play at running back to rest Chappell.

Tight end-safety Brennan Farley will return to action tonight after sitting out last week's game with a concussion.

The Colonel defense will have to keep tabs on Dreshawn Kinslow for Fern Creek, which runs a Wing T offense.

"They like to get the ball to him. They'll line him up at quarterback out of the Wildcat. We have to know where he's at," Clevenger said.

Despite a 2-8 record, the Tigers put a scare into Fifth District champion Ballard in a 13-12 loss. "They have enough athletes to beat us," Clevenger said. "I'm sure their coach is telling them that everybody is 0-0 right now. It's a chance for them to make some noise."

"Getting off to a good start like we've been doing will be a key for us," he said.

■ In tonight's other 6-A games in the region, Eastern (8-2) will host Marshall County (5-5), Daviess County (5-5) hosts Oldham County (4-6) and Ballard

(7-3) hosts Muhlenberg County (2-8). The Henderson-Fern Creek winner will face either Eastern or Marshall in the second round.

■ Union County (5-5) and Murray (8-2) will stage a rematch in the first round of the 2-A playoffs tonight in Murray. Kickoff is at 7:30 p.m. at Ty Holland Stadium behind Murray Middle School.

The Tigers beat the Braves 14-6 in the opening round last year in Murray, en route to their Final Four appearance.

Union County won four of its last five games to take the No. 3 seed in the Second District.

The winner of tonight's game will face either top-ranked Owensboro Catholic or Crittenden County in the second round.

Cats roll in exhibition

■ Kentucky cruises to 93-61 win over Northwood

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kentucky’s highly touted freshman class sent Big Blue Nation home from Thursday night’s exhibition opener against Northwood with something to feel good about.

Archie Goodwin scored 22 points, Nerlens Noel added 17 and Alex Poythress had 11 as the rookies led five Wildcats in double figures in a 93-61 exhibition victory.

Noel added 11 rebounds and four blocks for the third-ranked Wildcats, who got 15 points from sophomore guard Ryan Harrow and 12 from sophomore forward Kyle Wiltjer. Willie Cauley-Stein, another freshman, had eight points.

“We were better than I thought we’d be,” Wildcats coach John Calipari said. “We’re way away from where we need to be.”

For the Wildcats’ freshmen — following in the footsteps of a team that won last season’s NCAA championship with rookies Anthony Davis and Michael Kidd-Gilchrist — the debut was even better than expected.

Kentucky shot 61 percent and outrebounded Northwood 42-30, holding the Seahawks to 36 percent shooting. The Wildcats committed 17 turnovers, but Calipari expected that from his rookies, who he used in 12 combinations.

“It’s early, and we’re going to make mistakes,” Noel said. “If we keep working hard in the gym, we’ll cut down those mistakes and really get to balling.”

He rolled out Noel, Wiltjer, Goodwin, Poythress and Harrow to start, subbing 7-footer Cauley-Stein for Noel about five minutes in and then trying his two big men together.

At times it was just Cauley-Stein or Noel in the middle, surrounded with a combination featuring Harrow and/or Mays. But the lineup was rarely without Poythress and Goodwin, who played 18 and 19 minutes, respectively, in the first half.

“I didn’t know I was going to play that much,” said Harrow, who shot 7 of 12 in 30 minutes at both guard spots. “It was just something that happened. I just adjusted as best as I could.”

Forward Masse Doumbe scored 25 points for Northwood, which plays in the NAIA. It was the first time back in Rupp Arena for Seahawks coach Rollie Massimino, who led Villanova to an upset of Georgetown in the 1985 NCAA championship here.

He was introduced with a video tribute of the final minutes of the Wildcats’ victory.

“That was extremely well done,” Massimino said. “I really appreciate that.”

Cardinals romp past Pikeville in exhibition

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Louisville hung its ninth Final Four banner Thursday night and immediately began its pursuit of a higher focus this season: a national title.

Playing their first exhibition, the second-ranked Cardinals beat Pikeville 93-57. Freshman Montrezl Harrell led Louisville with 19 points and 13 rebounds while returning center Gorgui Dieng added 16 points and 12 rebounds.

The Cardinals overpowered the 2010-11 NAIA champions, blocking 10 shots and outscoring the Bears 66-14 in the paint.

Pikeville senior Jamar Briscoe led all scorers with 26 points.

Louisville coach Rick Pitino presented Pikeville guard Elisha Justice his Final Four ring before the game. The former Kentucky Mr. Basketball transferred from Louisville this offseason to be closer to his eastern Kentucky home but did not play due to a left knee injury.

Peyton Siva, the Big

East’s preseason player of the year, had six assists and joined backcourtmate Russ Smith with 17 points.

Harrell capped a late first-half run with a dunk off an inbounds pass before blocking a 3-point attempt that he dished ahead to Smith for a layup. He chased guards as the head of Louisville’s press defense for most of his 25 minutes.

“I think I did pretty good making a first impression,” he said. “I’ve been waiting for November 1st for the longest (time).”

Harrell started at power forward in place of suspended Chane Behanan, whom Pitino is holding out of both exhibitions and banned from speaking with the media this semester. Guard Kevin Ware also missed Thursday’s game while serving a one-game suspension.

“Chane’s problems are from the summer. He had to do certain things and he didn’t do them,” Pitino said of Behanan’s status. “I hope he’s ready for the Manhattan game.”

Trainer Mott eyeing Breeders’ Cup sweep

■ He’ll go with Royal Delta and three other horses in BC Classics

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

ARCADIA, Calif. — Bill Mott is in position to duplicate the ultimate daily double. The Hall of Fame trainer swept the $2 million Ladies’ Classic and $5 million Classic at last year’s Breeders’ Cup. He could do it again this weekend, with Royal Delta defending her Ladies’ title and three of his horses running in the big race.

The Breeders’ Cup has been dominated by females in recent years, led by Zenyatta, Rachel Alexandra and Havre de Grace, whose body of work garnered Horse of the Year honors for each of them.

It could happen again starting Friday, when Royal Delta heads one of the deepest fields ever in the Ladies’ Classic at Santa Anita. She’s the 9-5 favorite for the 1 1/8-mile race. She could help Mott make history, too, as the first trainer to win the race three straight years and fifth time overall.

But two undefeated fillies are in her way.

Awesome Feather is 10-0, while My Miss Aurelia is 6-0. Both won the BC Juvenile Fillies as 2-year-olds.

Mott comes back strong on Saturday with Flat Out, Ron the Greek and To Honor and Serve in the Classic. The 9-5 early favorite for the 1 ¼-mile race is Game On Dude, trained by Hall of Famer Bob Baffert and co-owned by Joe Torre, former manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Yankees.

Pool Play is warmed up during a training session for the Breeders’ Cup horse races at Santa Anita Park on Thursday in Arcadia, Calif. Pool Play is entered in Saturday’s Classic race.

race,” Mott said. “If you really asked me who I would pick, one over the other, I couldn’t do it. That’s how well they’re doing.”

Game On Dude led most of the way in last year’s Classic at Churchill Downs before Drosselmeyer overhauled him in the closing strides to win for Mott, who could become the second trainer since Jay Robbins in 2000-2001 to repeat in North America’s richest race.

John Shirreffs completed the BC double in 2009 with Life is Sweet in the Ladies’ Classic and Zenyatta in the Classic.

“I’m not trying to do it just because we did it last year,” Mott said about his attempted double. “I feel no pressure to do that. I just want to do it because we’re in there. I’ve got three good horses in the Classic and I think any one of them could win the race on their big day.”

Mott had bid Royal Delta farewell a week after her victory at Churchill Downs last November. Her breeder-owner Prince Saud bin Khaled had died earlier in the year and his racing stable was sold to settle his estate. Royal Delta was sold to Benjamin Leon for $8.5 million.

“I had no expectations of getting her back,” Mott said. “It was a sad day when I had to walk her out of my barn down to that van and send her to Keeneland. It was a little bit like I was walking to my best friend’s funeral.”

Mott attended the Keeneland sale and congratulated Leon after his purchase. The new owner told Mott to call him in a week or two, and that’s when he found Royal Delta was coming back to his barn.

“It was great,” the trainer said.

Of Mott’s three Classic horses, both Flat Out and Ron the Greek came to him from other stables, while To Honor and Serve has been with him from the start.

Flat Out finished fifth, beaten three lengths, in last year’s Classic for trainer Scooter Dickey. His owner wanted the horse in New York, where Mott is based, and he got him. Flat Out has tender feet, making him a challenge to train.

“He’s been a willing student and done everything we’ve asked of him,” Mott said, noting the horse won the Jockey Club Gold Cup the last two years.

Ron the Greek was transferred to Mott in mid-2011 and has blossomed into a four-time stakes winner. To Honor and Serve has eight wins in 16 career starts.

Oosthuizen, Scott share HSBC Champions lead

Wire reports

Louis Oosthuizen and Adam Scott took advantage of the par 5s at Mission Hills and each had a 7-under 65 on Thursday to lead the HSBC Champions after the first round.

Oosthuizen, who won the British Open at St. Andrews two years ago, played bogey-free and birdied all five par 5s on the Jose Maria Olazabal-designed course. Scott, the runner-up at the British Open this summer, made four birdies and an eagle on the par 5s.

Two-time HSBC Champions winner Phil Mickelson was a stroke back along with Masters champion Bubba Watson, Shane Lowry of Ireland and Peter Hanson of Sweden, who can overtake Rory McIlroy on the European Tour money list with a victory in this World Golf Championship.

Oosthuizen and Scott are both looking for their first PGA Tour win this year, and the HSBC Champions would count toward that because both are tour members.

Dustin Johnson had a 67 and was two strokes behind, along with Prom Meesawat of Thailand.

■ Champions Tour: Defending champion Jay Don Blake birdied three of the final four holes for a 6-under 64 and the first-round lead in the Champions Tour’s season-ending Charles Schwab Cup Championship.

The winner last year at TPC Harding Park in San Francisco, the 54-year-old Blake had a one-stroke lead over Gary Hallberg.

Fred Couples, Jay Haas, Olin Browne and Bill Glasson shot 66 on Desert Mountain’s Coghise Course. Couples is playing for the first time since a back injury forced him to withdraw from the Boeing Classic in late August.

Schwab Cup points leader Bernhard Langer birdied the final two holes for a 69, Tom Lehman shot a 68, and Roger Chapman had a 69. Langer has a 211-point lead over Lehman and 657-point advantage over Chapman in the race for the $1 million annuity.

■ Asia-Pacific: One week after turning 14, Guan Tianlang of China had a 6-under 66 to build a two-shot lead after the opening round of the Asia-Pacific Amateur Championship.

‘Game manager’ high praise

■ Saban says QBs should be proud of that label

By John Zenor
Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — A quarterback described as a game manager can often be perceived as someone who’s mostly responsible for supervising plays and not making them. Unless the QB is AJ McCarron and he plays for Nick Saban. The coach of top-ranked Alabama considers it the highest praise. No. 5 LSU (7-1, 3-1 Southeastern Conference) would love to get a McCarron-like, efficient performance from Zach Mettenberger Saturday night in Baton Rouge where both passers will be supported by punishing tailbacks and terrific defenses.

McCarron has been the consummate game manager even with 18 touchdown passes. “I don’t think it’s fair to AJ that because I said he’s a really good game manager for us that it’s like that means he doesn’t do anything,” Saban said. “He does everything. I don’t think you can be a good quarterback unless you’re a really good game manager. That’s the ultimate compliment, to me.” McCarron has been the nation’s most efficient passer with a quarterback rating of 182.4 for Alabama (8-0, 5-0). He’s thrown 262 passes without an interception dating back to last season, second-longest in SEC history behind the 325-pass streak by Kentucky’s Andre’ Woodson. McCarron wants to clear up what being a game manager means in his eyes. “What I think and then what the media tries to make a game manager out to be is two totally different things,” he said. “I probably think more along the lines of coach Saban. A game manager can be anything. I mean, he can throw nine touchdowns in one game but he still managed the game. He could hand the ball off 47 times but still manage the game. “I think coach, in that aspect, is saying he’s taking what the defense is giving him and he’s not making any real bonehead mistakes. And that’s the biggest thing. People nowadays love to see the ball being slung around and everything but that’s not our style of play. So I’m going to, like what coach always, take what the defense gives me and ... eventually they’ll give you the game.” The strong-armed Mettenberger might still be finding his way toward the game manager role in his first year as starter. He hasn’t completed 50 percent of his passes in any of the last three games — all against ranked SEC teams — and has one touchdown pass, two interceptions and a modest 403 passing yards during that stretch. Mettenberger has been intercepted a modest four times through eight games. Running back Michael Ford and his teammates are standing by their quarterback. “He throws a little bad ball and everybody jumps on his back,” Ford said. “We’ve just got to go out there and give him confidence.” It’s Mettenberger’s first time playing in an Alabama-LSU confrontation. He knows the big-game drill, though. “You have to be level-headed,” Mettenberger said. “You can’t get too jacked up or you will start throwing balls in the stands. You can’t play with your tail tucked between legs or you’ll play too timid. It’s a fine line, between looking too relaxed and being too jacked up. A quarterback has to do a good job keeping your emotions in check during the game. “You want to get amped up, but at the same time I don’t have to go hit anybody. I’ll definitely be ready to go for this game, I promise you that.” Taking care of the ball is an important challenge for both quarterbacks. Alabama’s defense leads the SEC with 14 interceptions and LSU is second with 13. Tide cornerback Dee Milliner said Mettenberger is a “great quarterback, a big-armed quarterback.” “He does a great job of operating and knowing what the defense does and hits the key holes on pass plays,” Milliner said.

Yet Nick Saban, the coach of No. 1 Alabama, thinks it’s the “ultimate compliment” for McCarron and his counterpart Mettenberger of No. 5 LSU.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

“He’s checking a lot and doing some great things. We’ve got to come in and try to throw some different things at him, different schemes to try to mix him up.” McCarron was solid in the first meeting last season and was offensive MVP of the BCS championship game with an impressive performance, keeping LSU off-guard with frequent passes on first down. LSU defenders said they see a big difference in McCarron this season. “He’s improved a lot,” Tigers linebacker Kevin Minter said. “He’s a totally different person. His confidence is through the roof right now. You can just tell. He’s very comfortable back there passing the ball. You can just see it in his play and his stats. That’s why he’s a dark horse to win the Heisman. The guy is just doing his thing this year.”

BCS bowls are longing to give bid to the Irish

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Some BCS officials are almost as giddy about the prospect of Notre Dame playing in one of their bowl games as Fighting Irish fans are. “I tend to think right now, there’s a lot to be played, but I don’t see how they could avoid being in a BCS game somewhere,” Fiesta Bowl executive director Robert Shelton said. “They have four games left. Anything can happen, but they’re looking so strong. Even if they only win two of those, certainly if they win three or four, they will be in a BCS game.”

The fourth-ranked Fighting Irish (8-0) are third in the BCS standings heading into their game against Pittsburgh (4-4) on Saturday, where they are 16.5-point favorites. They likely will be favored against Boston College (2-6) and Wake Forest (4-4) before the season finale at Southern California (6-2). Officials with the Fiesta, Rose, Orange and Sugar bowls all say they will consider the Irish under the right circumstances, primarily that they meet the minimum requirements of nine victories and being among the top 14 teams in the final BCS standings. Notre Dame would prefer not being an at-large team, hoping instead to finish in the top two and earn a shot at the school’s first national championship since 1988 in the BCS title game Jan. 7 in Miami. Irish players say it would be hard to believe they wouldn’t get a shot if they remain undefeated. If it happens, though, they say they would have to accept it. Coach Brian Kelly said he’s not paying attention to all the BCS possibilities, saying he’s leaving that to others. Kelly, who narrowly missed qualifying for the national championship game while at Cincinnati in 2009, said he doesn’t plan to try to lobby for the Irish.

Shelton made it clear that the Fiesta Bowl, where the Irish played following the 2000 and 2005 seasons, would love to host them again. “There are a number of schools that have national followings but none of them really to the extent of Notre Dame. There are a lot of Notre Dame lovers here in the valley and probably some of those who would vote against Notre Dame, too. But that shows you have a national brand,” he said. Kevin Ash, chief administrative officer of the Rose Bowl, said its first choice is always to pit a Big Ten team against a Pac-12 team. But he said if Oregon ends up going to the national championship game and another Pac-12 team isn’t eligible, the Irish would be an attractive choice in part because of its history.

NFL hopes to deter players from faking injuries

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

When Pittsburgh Steelers receiver Emmanuel Sanders suddenly dropped to the turf late in the fourth quarter, was helped to the sideline, returned after missing one play, then managed to be the first player down the field on punt coverage, announcers Al Michaels and Cris Collinsworth let NBC’s audience know their feelings. “Man,” Michaels said, his voice dripping with sarcasm, “I’m sure glad Sanders is OK.” In a similar tone, Collinsworth chimed in: “It’s a miracle.” Both chuckled. More guffaws and hearty mocking of Sanders came from ESPN’s talking heads on a “C’mon Man!” segment a couple of days later. Safe to say the NFL doesn’t consider this a laughing matter: The league told Sanders it wants to chat about what happened in that Sunday night game against the Cincinnati Bengals. When a reporter asked Sanders this week whether he really had a cramp against the Bengals, he didn’t answer directly, saying: “We’re going to speak on it when we get to New York.” At least one of the Bengals, safety Chris Crocker, was hardly bothered by the tactic. “If you’re not cheating, you’re not trying,” I guess, is the old saying,” Crocker said. “So if you can slow the game down, why not?” Bengals coach Marvin Lewis didn’t really want to touch the topic, other than to say he thinks “it’s generally a rare occasion.” All 32 teams’ general managers and head coaches were sent a memo back in September by Ray Anderson, the NFL’s executive vice president of football operations, reminding them, “The Competition

TOM UHLMANN/ASSOCIATED PRESS
Pittsburgh Steelers receiver Emmanuel Sanders is checked by trainers during an Oct. 21 game against the Cincinnati Bengals in Cincinnati.

Committee deprecates feigning injuries, with subsequent withdrawal, to obtain a timeout without penalty. Coaches are urged to cooperate in discouraging this practice.” The league could fine coaches, players or clubs — or it could decide to take away draft picks. No one has been punished yet for faking an injury.

According to the memo, the “Competition Committee has reviewed this issue several times, but has been reluctant to propose a specific rule, since assessing a charged timeout for every injury timeout would deprive a team of timeouts for strategic purposes. It also could encourage injured players to remain in the game at risk to themselves to avoid incurring a charged team timeout.” It’s a football strategy that’s been around for years, in college and the pros: A player fakes an injury, stopping the clock — maybe it saves a timeout; maybe it slows an opponent’s no-huddle offense. As a receiver with the Bengals in the 1980s, Collinsworth grew accustomed to seeing opposing defenses have players pretend to be hurt. “It would almost get to where you would laugh about it. It was ridiculous,” he said in a telephone interview. “Everybody on the field — including the referees — knew what they were doing.” There have been other such episodes this fall, including when Washington Redskins defensive lineman Kedric Golston mysteriously went down on a play against a no-huddle offense, then came back in the game. In college, Wyoming coach Dave Christensen chewed out Air Force coach Troy Calhoun — earning a suspension and fine — after the Falcons’ backup quarterback came in and ran for the winning score in place of a starter who went down on the field, saving a timeout. There doesn’t really appear a way to prevent it. “Referees certainly don’t want that burden of having to determine who’s healthy and who’s not. So as long as teams are willing to do it, there’s nothing really that I know of that can stop them,” Collinsworth said.

Redmond hired as new Marlins manager

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — The Miami Marlins’ celebrity manager was a bust, so they’re calling one up from the minors. Mike Redmond, who spent the past two years managing Class A teams in the Toronto Blue Jays’ system, was hired Thursday by the Marlins to replace Ozzie Guillen. A former major league catcher, Redmond had not interviewed for a big league job until he met with the Marlins last week. He’ll be introduced as their fifth manager since early 2010 at a news conference at their ballpark Friday.

Guillen was fired last week after only one season with the Marlins. A year ago they traded two minor league players to obtain him from the Chicago White Sox and gave him a team-record $10 million, four-year deal. Redmond brings a much lower profile. A .287 hitter over 13 seasons, he played seven years for the Marlins and helped them win the World Series in 2003. Redmond was popular with teammates because of his droll wit, and they still fondly recall him taking batting practice naked in an indoor cage several days in a row to help the 2003 team snap a slump. Because of Redmond’s ties to Miami owner Jeffrey Loria and president of baseball operations Larry Beinfest, he was considered the front-runner for the job. Also interviewed were former major league manager Larry Bowa, former Pittsburgh Pirates manager Lloyd McClendon and Cincinnati Reds pitching coach Bryan Price. Even during Redmond’s playing days, he expressed an interest in managing. He played for Jim Leyland, Jack McKeon and Ron Gardenhire, among others. “People ask you, ‘What’s your style?’” Redmond said last week. “I learned a lot from all of my managers.” The rebranded Marlins moved into a new ballpark this year with a heftier payroll and high hopes, but the promising season began to derail in the first week with Guillen’s laudatory comments about former Cuban leader Fidel Castro. Six months later, the episode was a factor in the decision to fire Guillen. A lousy record and disappointing attendance didn’t help, either. Despite a free-agent spending spree a year ago, the Marlins finished last in the NL East at 69-93, their worst record since 1999. The Marlins drew more than 2.2 million fans but had projected attendance of nearly 3 million.

Most major automakers report sales jump

■ Industry offering strong October numbers despite losses blamed on Sandy

By Tom Kirsher
Associated Press

DETROIT — Most major automakers reported sales increases in October despite losing at least three days of business to the punishing rain and wind from Superstorm Sandy.

Toyota said its sales rose almost 16 percent for the month, while Volkswagen reported another strong month with sales up 22 percent. Honda sales slowed from double-digit growth earlier in the year to 8.8 percent, while Chrysler sales rose 10 percent. General Motors was up 5 percent and Ford rose slightly.

Of major automakers, only Nissan reported a decrease, 3.2 percent, as Sandy pounded the Northeast, the company's top-performing region.

Yet the results show that Americans continue to buy new cars and trucks at a strong pace. Chrysler predicted an annual sales rate of 14.7 million for the U.S. industry in October, making it one of the year's strongest months. Auto sales ran at an annual rate of 14.3 million through September.

Industry analysts estimated that the storm cut U.S. sales by about 20,000 cars and trucks in October as buyers hunkered down for the storm. But the Nissan brand, which gets 27 percent of its U.S. sales from the Northeast, was hit particularly hard.

Many automakers announced discounts in the storm-ravaged region, including Nissan, which is offering the same prices it gives to employees.

Volkswagen said one-quarter of its dealerships were affected by the storm, but it still delivered its best October in nearly 40 years at just over 34,000 vehicles. Sales were led by the Passat midsize sedan, which was up 66 percent.

Chrysler said it sold 126,000 cars and trucks for the month, led by the Ram pickup, which was up 20 percent, and the Dodge Caravan van, which saw sales rise 49 percent.

At Ford, sales increased only

0.4 percent to 168,000 cars and trucks. The company said F-Series pickup trucks, the most popular vehicle in the nation, had their best October in eight years.

At GM, sales rose to nearly 196,000 vehicles for the month, led by the Cruze and Sonic small cars. Cruze sales were up 34 percent, while Sonic sales rose 43 percent.

Toyota said its sales rose to 155,000 vehicles.

Industry analysts were expecting an annual sales rate in October of 14.7 million to 14.9 million, but that was before Sandy hit Monday.

Stocks have best day since September

The Associated Press

It's only been a day, but November on Wall Street is already looking a lot better than October.

Strong economic data and corporate news converged Thursday to give U.S. stocks their best day since mid-September. Positive signs about the job market and soaring sales figures pushed stock futures up before the market opened. A half-hour into trading, reports on manufacturing and consumer confidence added another log to the fire.

The Dow Jones industrial average had already risen 100 points when the mid-morning reports came out. The data — including news that manufacturing grew for the second straight month — pushed it up as much as 177 points. It fell back some, but held a steady gain for the rest of the day.

The Dow closed up 136.16 points, or 1 percent, at 13,232.62. It was the best day for the Dow since Sept. 13.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 15.43 points, or 1.1 percent, to 1,427.59. The Nasdaq composite index added 42.83, or 1.4 percent, to 3,020.06.

All three indexes fell in October, their first monthly losses since May.

It was the second day of trading after Superstorm Sandy ravaged New York and forced markets to close on Monday and Tuesday. Companies that had postponed earnings announcements rushed to release their results.

Thursday's upswing started with strong sales results from retailers and automakers. Chrysler had its best October in five years, with sales rising 10 percent, despite the three-day disruption caused by the storm.

Exxon Mobil beat the financial expectations of analysts surveyed by FactSet, but reported lower production of oil and gas. Its stock rose 43 cents to $91.60.

Kellogg Co.'s net income edged up in the third quarter as its acquisition of Pringles chips earlier this year paid off. Kellogg leapt $1.18, or 2.3 percent, to $53.50.

Pfizer said its third-quarter profit fell 14 percent on plunging sales, mainly due to new competition from generic forms of Lipitor, long the world's top-selling drug. Pfizer fell 32 cents to $24.55.

Advice

View marriage as fragile institution that needs protection

Dear Amy: Many years ago, I remember hearing that if you love someone, you should let the person know (because you never know when something can happen and you'll never see the person again). I'm wondering — are there exceptions to this? Let me describe the following scenario. I'd like to hear what you think.

A married man who has a good marriage to Lady A meets Lady B. Lady B is married, but the man doesn't know what kind of marriage Lady B has. He has never met Lady B's husband. The man falls in love with Lady B but has never told her that. The man wants to make sure his feelings for Lady B are real, and after knowing her for more than two years he realizes his feelings are genuine.

Should the man tell Lady B how he feels about her?

— Wondering

Dear Wondering: In your letter, the man — let's call him you — doesn't know "what kind of marriage

'Lady B' has." In this particular situation you should not view marriage as an institution that lends itself to variety.

Even though we all know that no two marriages are alike, for the purposes of this discussion you should look upon marriage — your own, for instance — as an important, fragile and delicate institution that needs to be appreciated and protected.

A gentleman respects and protects not only his own marriage, but the marriages of people he cares about.

Meaning: Don't mess with someone else's marriage. Honor your own.

However, I know well how hot burneth this flame. You sound determined to declare your love. Keep in mind, your feelings may well be unrequited. Expressing them may cause embarrassment for both of you. Prepare yourself for that.

But, most important, if you want to declare your love for Lady B, you'd better deal with your feelings about Lady A first.

Dear Amy: "Nice Guy" has an elderly neighbor who asks him to take out her garbage every day and never says "thank you."

It is truly a shame that this action by an old lady would give him anxiety, but, that being said, may I suggest the following: It sounds like the old lady sits by the window waiting for the Nice Guy to come home.

I suggest that when she sticks her head out the door and asks him to take her garbage out, his answer should be, "Only if you say 'please,'" and see what she says. I believe he will get his "please" and will hear it in the future.

But even if she doesn't comply, he should take the high road. It's only garbage.

— Mr. D

Dear Mr. D: I have a feeling you're a "Nice Guy" too.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Nov. 2). This year brings a surge of personal power, and you'll conquer the fear that once held you back. December sees you rise up along a chain of command. January bonds you with a small group of like minds. Together you will be unstoppable. You'll invest in your appearance or transportation in March. May brings a windfall. Capricorn and Aquarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 28, 38, 41 and 2.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). Someone is waiting for you to make the first move. Once it's made, sparks will fly, and there will be no going back. So be sure this is really what you want.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). What should be familiar territory doesn't seem to be at all. That's because a new person is involved, and this person changes everything. Pause to come up with an approach that will better suit the current scene.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). You know you're in love when no matter what a certain someone does you think it's just adorable. Others may not share your opinion, but you're so enamored that they'll probably think you are "just adorable," too.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). You got where you are by making a series of choices. You'll break them down in your head to figure out the particular choices that were the most effective. You want to repeat them in order to get to the next place.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll probably need to bounce from Plan A to Plan B. And be sure to make a contingency plan if that one doesn't work out, either. Luckily, whatever happens will be more fun than any of the previous plans.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You've always sensed that you were the rock in someone's life, but you'll feel it more now that he or she is leaning on you. Ground yourself, as this feeling could last through the weekend.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Being nice is important to you, not only because you think it's the right way to be, but also because you know that kindness is contagious. With your graceful handling of a situation, you'll teach compassion.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The one who finds the gold doesn't have to start the rush. You'll find a kind of treasure that has great value to you. You'll also be smart about what to share and when.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You'll be learning from someone else, possibly someone intimidating. Having more knowledge doesn't make a person better than anyone else, but it sometimes makes a person believe this is true.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). In regard to a certain relationship, you make it seem like you are letting things unfold according to their own timeline. But truthfully, you're playing it cool, very much in control of the pacing.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). A healing process is underway. You can't speed it along, but you can take good care of yourself, putting yourself in the kind of supportive environment that will allow nature to take its course.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). A loved one may openly disagree with you, starting a lively debate. You may actually enjoy the argument and gain something valuable from it. Diverse opinions and talents make a relationship strong.

Spicy swedish meatballs favorite among readers

Dear Heloise: Here is a recipe for spicy swedish meatballs that many readers request, since it's a favorite as an appetizer at all gatherings! You will need:

- 2 cups breadcrumbs
- ½ cup milk
- 8 ounces ground beef
- 8 ounces sausage meat (spicy)
- ½ teaspoon onion powder
- ½ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
- 1 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1 teaspoon soy sauce
- ½ teaspoon monosodium glutamate (optional)
- 5-ounce can sliced water chestnuts, chopped

Mix breadcrumbs and milk together in a large bowl, then add all other ingredients into the bowl and mix well.

Place formed meatballs (they should be about 1 ½ inches) onto an ungreased cookie sheet with sides. Bake for about 30 minutes at 350 degrees F, or until golden brown. Drain on paper towels before serving.

They go perfectly with my jelly or wine sauce. Want to know the recipes? Order my pamphlet Heloise's Main Dishes and More. Send $3 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (65 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Main Dishes, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001.

Ask God to guide you to church home

Dear Dr. Graham: Does the Bible say a husband and wife must go to the same church? We can't agree where to go, and the simplest thing would be for us to go to different churches. Would this be wrong?

— Mrs. W.M.

Dear Mrs. W.M.: The Bible doesn't say anything directly about this; the problem didn't arise because Christians were few in number in those days, and they knew they needed to draw strength from each other.

If it's at all possible, however, I certainly urge couples to attend the same church. Not only will it help them grow closer to each other and to God, but it will help their children learn about Jesus.

Although my wife and too quickly, but ask God to guide you to one where the Bible is preached and taught, and you can have fellowship with other believers.

In addition, think through what you really need in a church. Do you simply want a church that reminds you of the one you grew up in? Or are you honestly seeking a church where you can grow in your faith, and you can serve Christ?

Above all, put Jesus Christ at the center of your lives — as individuals and as a family. When our lives are centered in Him, disagreements begin to fade. Remember the Bible's admonition: "Let us not give up meeting together ... but let us encourage one another" (Hebrews 10:25).

Ask doctor to check thyroid before taking any supplements

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I'm curious about underactive thyroid. I came across a website that said an underactive thyroid can cause some of the problems that have plagued me for quite a few years. Some of the symptoms listed were hair loss, tiredness, inability to lose weight despite healthy diet and exercise, gravelly voice and many others.

After checking off all the things that applied to me, it said I have a 65 percent chance of having an underactive thyroid. I don't believe my doctor has ever checked my thyroid. Is this something I should ask for?

They also recommended a supplement called "iodine plus 2." Do you think this supplement is safe? Would you recommend it?

— U.F.

Dear U.F.: You make a very good case for hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid). The thyroid regulates many metabolic pathways in the body and essentially affects every organ. Both hypothyroidism and hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid) are very common conditions, though hypothyroid is more so. You absolutely should get checked.

However, I find that even in people who I am sure will have hypothyroidism, the thyroid tests (blood tests) come out normal.

Doctors have to resist the urge to use thyroid replacement to treat people without proven hypothyroidism, since it doesn't help and can cause side effects; essentially, medication makes a normal person seem to have an overactive thyroid.

Speaking of dangerous, I would not recommend the supplement. You want to know what you are doing before doing it. Get the thyroid test done first.

A borderline overactive thyroid paradoxically can have very similar symptoms to underactive thyroid. Iodine can turn it into a hyperactive thyroid emergency.

Dr. Paul Donohue will be retiring at the end of 2012. Dr. Keith Roach will share the byline during the transition period and assume sole authorship of "To Your Good Health" beginning in January. Readers may write the doctors or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

FARMING

Tax advantages on insurance proceeds possible with planning

Special to The Gleaner

Farmers across the state of Kentucky have been faced with drought conditions this summer. Based on this year's drought, there will most likely be large crop insurance claims.

Livestock producers are struggling to find adequate feed supplies, which could result in selling more livestock than normal.

In both situations, farm income could be higher than normal, despite the weather disaster. With proper planning, producers may be able to structure when to report these crop insurance proceeds and/or additional livestock sales in order to achieve the best tax advantage.

Many producers carried large grain inventories into 2012 and have already received considerable income from grain sales this year.

As a result, these producers might not want to pay taxes on the crop insurance income in 2012. Crop insurance proceeds due to crop damage must be reported in the year of receipt. However, the tax laws do allow farmers to make a deferral on income taxes until the next year if certain conditions are met.

Farmers can postpone reporting crop insurance proceeds as income until the year following the year the damage occurred if the cash method of accounting is used, the crop insurance proceeds are received in the same year the crops were damaged, and it can be shown that under normal business practices the income from the damaged crops would have been included in the tax year following the year the damage occurred.

Only the payment for destruction or damage to the crop (yield loss) is eligible for deferral. Indemnities from price declines are not deferrable.

If it is not itemized from the insurance company, the company must be contacted to determine what part of the indemnity is from a price decline and what part is from a yield loss.

For example: Farmer John uses the cash method of accounting. He receives a claim for damage done to the 2012 crop in November 2012. The claim is for damage done to the crop, not a reduction in price.

In a normal business year, Farmer John sells only 25% of his grain in the year it is harvested and carries 75% of it into the following year. Farmer John would be able to defer the tax liability of the crop insurance proceeds to 2013.

Generally if producers elect to defer any eligible crop insurance proceeds, all such crop insurance proceeds must be deferred, including federal crop disaster payments. If payments are received for multiple crops, the payment for one crop cannot be postponed unless the payments for all crops are postponed.

Also, the sales from the crops that are normally postponed must be more than 50% of the total sales in order to defer the proceeds. The election to defer is made on the tax return. The amount of crop insurance proceeds received is reported on Schedule F, line 6a. However, if it is being deferred, do not include it as a taxable amount on line 6b.

A statement must also be attached to the tax return that includes the specific crop or crops damaged; a declaration that under normal business practices, the crop sales would have been included in income in the following year; the cause of the destruction or damage and the dates it occurred; the total payments you received, itemized for each specific crop, and the date you received payment; and the name of the insurance carrier.

For livestock producers, a livestock deferral can be made for those who were forced to sell livestock because of a weather-related disaster.

In order to postpone reporting the gain from the additional animals until the next year, the principal business must be farming, the cash method of accounting must be used, it can be proven that under normal business practices the additional animals would not have been sold, and the weather-related condition must have caused the area to be designated as eligible for assistance by the federal government.

Sales made before an area became eligible for federal assistance do qualify if the animals were sold as a result of the same weather-related condition that caused the area to be designated as eligible for assistance. Only the gain on the sale of those animals above and beyond what was normally sold, qualify for postponement.

For example: Farmer John uses cash basis accounting and normally sells 100 head of cattle a year. As a result of drought, he sold 150 head during 2012. Sales totaled $114,000. In July 2012, as a result of drought, the area was declared a disaster area eligible for federal assistance.

The income that can be postponed until 2013 is $38,000 ($114,000 divided by 150, multiplied by 50).

Income from livestock held for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes is not taxed if like-kind animals are repurchased within four years from the end of the tax year in which the animals were sold.

Weather variability is one of the main risks in agricultural production. This variability has an impact on crop and livestock production and thus farm income.

It is important for all producers to analyze their situation and determine how income should be treated. Tax planning will be essential this year, as noted above, the Section 179 limit is currently set at $139,000 and bonus depreciation is limited to 50% on new assets.

Before making any large income/expenditure decisions, please consult with your tax professional or KFBM specialist.

FSA county committee voting begins Monday

The Kentucky Farm Service Agency says ballots for the 2012 FSA county committee elections will be mailed to eligible voters on Monday. State FSA Executive Director John McCauley says FSA county committee allows producers to make important decisions concerning the local administration of federal farm programs.

To be an eligible voter, farmers and producers must participate or cooperate in FSA programs. A person who is not of legal voting age, but supervises and conducts the farming operations of an entire farm, can also vote.

Eligible voters who do not receive a ballot can obtain ballots at their local USDA Service Center. December 3 is the last day for voters to submit ballots in person to local USDA Service Centers. Ballots returned by mail must be postmarked no later than Dec. 3.

Crop reporting deadlines for fall barley, fall wheat, other fall-seeded small grains and peaches have changed for the 2013 crop year.

The new deadlines are: Dec. 15 –fall barley, fall wheat, and all other fall-seeded small grains; Jan. 15 – peaches

Producers should visit the Henderson County FSA office to complete acreage reporting.

The SURE program authorizes assistance to farmers and ranchers who suffered crop losses caused by natural disasters occurring through Sept. 30, 2011.

To be eligible for SURE, a farm must have:

- At least a 10-percent production loss on a crop of economic significance;
- A policy or plan of insurance under the Federal Crop Insurance Act or the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program for all economically significant crops;
- Been physically located in a county that was declared a primary disaster county or contiguous county by the Secretary of Agriculture under a Secretarial Disaster Designation. Without a Secretarial

Disaster Designation, individual producers may be eligible if the actual production on the farm is less than 50 percent of the normal production on the farm due to a natural disaster.

Producers considered socially disadvantaged, a beginning farmer, or a limited resource farmer may be eligible for SURE without a policy or plan of insurance or NAP coverage.

For more information on the 2011 SURE program contact the Henderson County FSA Office.

Acid Attack Stuns Mid-Town Diners!

“I thought he was having a heart attack” says worried onlooker

By Steve Kenston
Freelance Health Writer

My acid reflux burned through my chest. And scorched my throat so bad I couldn't speak. It doesn't happen a lot, but when it does, Its unbearable! Then I discovered something that changed my life.

It was supposed to be a perfect night out with close friends. But it ended up to be one of the worst nights of my life. Here's what happened... My wife and I were looking forward to having dinner with friends we haven't seen in a while. We were excited.

They chose one of best restaurants in the city. And as we entered the dining room, the aroma of the food made my mouth water. You could see everyone was really enjoying themselves. I couldn't wait to dig in! That is, until I took a good look at the menu...

"THERE'S NOTHING I CAN EAT HERE!"

My friends took one look at my face and knew something was wrong. “What's the matter, Steve? Are you okay?” “Yes”, I muttered. “It's just that all the dishes on the menu are covered with sauces, gravy and spices." I knew if I just had the tiniest bite of any this stuff; I would spend the rest of the night doubled over in pain.

A HORRIBLE FEELING!

But I knew better. I suffer from awful bouts of acid reflux. Just a little bit of sauce or spice could ruin my night (and everyone else's too). I've been there before.

I'd get a terrible burning sensation in my throat; like someone poured hot battery acid down it. And sometimes my chest would get so tight; I'd think I was having a heart attack.

I asked my doctor about prescription antacids. But he told me about recent FDA warnings that scared me half to death. I decided to stay away from drugs altogether.

Not wanting to be a party-pooper, I ordered a steak. No onions, No seasoning. How could I go wrong? Bad decision...

FDA WARNING!
ANTACID PILLS LINKED TO RISK OF HIP, BONE AND SPINAL FRACTURES with excessive or long term use.

IF YOU TAKE THE FOLLOWING ANTACID PRODUCTS BEWARE:
Prilosec®, Nexium®, Prevacid®, Dexilant®, Zegerid®, Protonix®, Aciphex®, Vimovo®

A HUGE MISTAKE!

A few minutes later, it hit me like a ton of bricks! The pain started in the lower portion of my stomach and doubled me over, I was literally curled up on the floor. I was in complete agony, I felt like I was going to die! No kidding!

Everyone in the restaurant was in shock. The manager called an ambulance and I spent the rest of the night in the emergency room. I thought it was a heart attack but later learned it was indigestion the worst attack I ever had!

Our “perfect night out” was ruined. And I was humiliated beyond belief.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

When I got home, I swore to myself, I was done! I couldn't live like this anymore. So I started asking questions to anyone who would listen. Then, as luck would have it, a co-worker told me about this product called AloeCure®.

My friend raved about it. He said excitedly, “Now, I can eat anything I want without worrying about stomach acid tearing me apart!”

I said to myself "what do I have to lose?" So I ordered it. A few days later AloeCure® showed up at my door.

The packaging said AloeCure® is an extract made from a special grade aloe vera. The same stuff mom used to put on your cuts when you were a kid.

I was excited to try it. And boy, am I glad I did... I was shocked. AloeCure® had a pleasant grape flavor. It didn't taste like medicine (because it's not medicine at all). The package said "AloeCure® works by balancing and neutralizing (and calming) the acid levels in your stomach so they don't wreak havoc with your digestive system". Sounded impressive enough to me.

THE ‘ACID’ TEST

But would it work? Later that day I passed a pizzeria and decided to put AloeCure® to the test. I went inside and ordered a slice.

A half hour later, something amazing happened... NOTHING! No pain. No burning in my throat. No pressure in my chest. I felt great! My occasional stomach nightmares were no longer a worry thanks to AloeCure®. It was the miracle I'd been praying for!

“NOW I DON’T WORRY ABOUT WHAT I EAT!”

It's true! One of the worst nights of my life led me to AloeCure®. Now I can eat what I want and not worry about sitting up all night with pain and indigestion. And since AloeCure® is all natural, it has ZERO negative side effects. Just take it once in the morning and once at night,

If you suffer, like me, I urge you to try it (unless of course you like being doubled over in pain). Just call 1-855-629-0633 and you can thank me later.

Co-writer of 'Oh, Pretty Woman' dies

The Associated Press
MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. — Bill Dees emerged from his days as an out-of-cash young songwriter to pen tunes recorded by Johnny Cash, Loretta Lynn and other country music greats, but the centerpiece of his career was his work with Roy Orbison, including co-writing the classic rock hit, "Oh, Pretty Woman."
Dees, who died in Arkansas last week at age 73, had said writing that song with Orbison in 1964 changed his life. In a 2008 interview with National Public Radio, Dees recalled that the night they penned the hit song, Orbison told him he wouldn't need to go to work that Monday if he didn't want to.

"He said, 'Buy yourself an electric piano, and I'll take you on the road with me.' And he said, 'I'll pay you what the band's getting,'" Dees said during the NPR interview, which is posted on his Dees' website.
He went on to tour Europe and perform on the Ed Sullivan Show with Orbison, with whom he also co-wrote numerous other songs, including "It's Over," which also was a No. 1 hit.

BEST BETS

7 p.m. on 25
Last Man Standing

Tim Allen returns for a second season as traditional manly man Mike Baxter, who struggles to feel like the guy in charge in his household full of females. In the season premiere, Mike tries to persuade his middle daughter, Mandy (Molly Ephraim), who's voting for the first time, to back his candidate, while Kristin and Ryan (Amanda Fuller, Jordan Masterson) urge her to vote for the other guy. Nancy Travis also stars in "Voting."

7 p.m. on 44
Undercover Boss

Athletic equipment, restaurant and bakery businesses are in the spotlight as this addictive reality series returns for its fourth season. Up first: Mitchell Modell, CEO of Modell's Sporting Goods, which has more than 150 stores in the Northeastern U.S., gets a taste of what life is like for his company's rank-and-file employees.

7 p.m. on 19
America's Next Top Model

The contestants' Jamaican adventure continues with a modeling session in which

Lily Tomlin

7 p.m. on 13
NBA Basketball

Ray Allen and Rashard Lewis take their talents to South Beach to join LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh in building a Miami Heat dynasty. They'll head to hostile territory tonight to take on Carmelo Anthony and the New York

Knicks at Madison Square Garden. Then it's the battle of Los Angeles' Staples Center tenants as Chris Paul, Blake Griffin and the Clippers "visit" Kobe Bryant, Dwight Howard, Steve Nash and the reloaded Lakers.

7:20 p.m. on 16
Movie: This Means War

Reese Witherspoon plays the woman between two suitors, whose rivalry escalates as they put their CIA backgrounds to work, in this amusing 2012 action-comedy from director McG ("Charlie's Angels"). Chris Pine ("Star Trek") and Tom Hardy ("Inception") play the contenders for the lady, and though she doesn't suspect the nature of their work for a while, it becomes more evident as the guys contend with a mutual foe (Til Schweiger). Chelsea Handler also stars.

7:31 p.m. on 25
Malibu Country

Reba McEntire's new sitcom combines elements of her former one with her real life. Once again, she plays a mom named Reba who's just dumped her cheating husband, but this Reba, like the real one, is a country singer. Newly divorced, she moves with the kids (Justin Prentice, Juliette Angelo) to California and tries to stay true to her roots. Lily Tomlin is a treat as Reba's own mother.

8 p.m. on 25
Shark Tank

Build a better mousetrap, the saying goes, and the world will beat a path to your door. What if you build a better fly trap instead? Ask Seth MacFarlane, the man behind "Family Guy," "American Dad" and "The Cleveland Show," who's on hand in this new episode to help a California man show Mark, Lori, Robert, Daymond and Kevin his new way to catch those winged pests.

Reese Witherspoon and Tom Hardy

8 p.m. on 19
Nikita

After Ryan (Noah Bean) tells Nikita (Maggie Q) that they need to free an agent who's been arrested, she asks why Division is still carrying out Percy's missions. Alex (Lyndsy Fonseca) is shot during an attempt to stop a terrorist attack. Birkhoff and Sonia (Aaron Stanford, Lyndie Greenwood) continue to butt heads. Shane West and Dillon Casey also star in the new episode "True Believer."

8 p.m. on 9
Election 2012: What's at Stake

Four days before voters head to the polls, this new special offers them a rundown of how President Barack Obama and Republican challenger Mitt Romney plan to address the big issues: the economy, health care and Medicare, Social Security, immigration and the country's interests abroad.

9 p.m. on 16
Hunted

During a family visit to a country estate, Jack Turner (Patrick Malahide) submits his bid on the dam contract, as do other interested parties. While trying to discover how much Jack bid, Sam (Melissa George) encounters someone who may have had something to do with the attempt on her life. Adam Rayner also stars in the new episode "Hourglass."

Adam Rayner and Melissa George

Law & Order: Criminal Intent

A scientist dies of radiation poisoning, and Goren and Eames (Vincent D'Onofrio, Kathryn Erbe) question a colleague (guest star Austin Pendleton), a brilliant physicist with a controversial theory about the definition of the universe. He may be a brain, but the detectives think his trophy wife might be the mastermind behind this death in "Inert Dwarf."

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Friday, Nov. 2, the 307th day of 2012. There are 59 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 2, 1962, President John F. Kennedy delivered a brief statement to the nation in which he said that aerial photographs had confirmed that Soviet missile bases in Cuba were being dismantled, and that "progress is now being made toward the restoration of peace in the Caribbean."

On this date:

In 1889, North Dakota and South Dakota became the 39th and 40th states.

In 1947, Howard Hughes piloted his huge wooden flying boat, the Hughes H-4 Hercules (derisively dubbed the "Spruce Goose" by detractors), on its only flight, which lasted about a minute over Long Beach Harbor in California.

In 1948, President Harry S. Truman surprised the experts by winning a narrow upset over Republican challenger Thomas E. Dewey.

In 1959, former game show contestant Charles Van Doren admitted to a House subcommittee that he'd been given questions and answers in advance when he appeared on NBC's "Twenty-One."

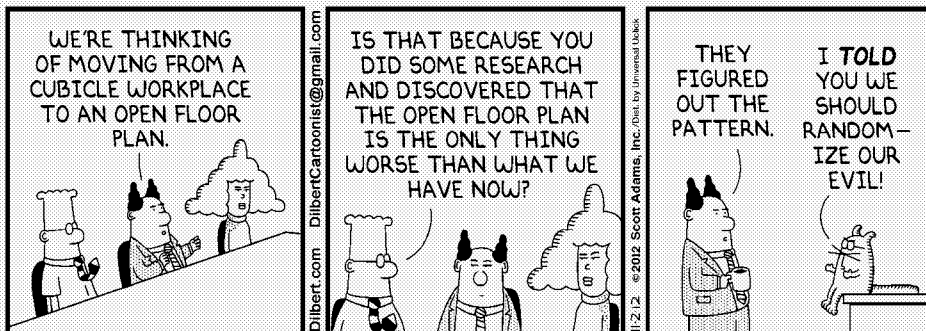

Five years ago: Choreographer Igor Moiseyev, who transformed folk dance into a legitimate art, died in Moscow at age 101.

One year ago: The Congressional Gold Medal was awarded to some 19,000 Japanese-Americans who'd served in the 100th Infantry Battalion, the 442nd Regimental Combat Team and the Military Intelligence Service.

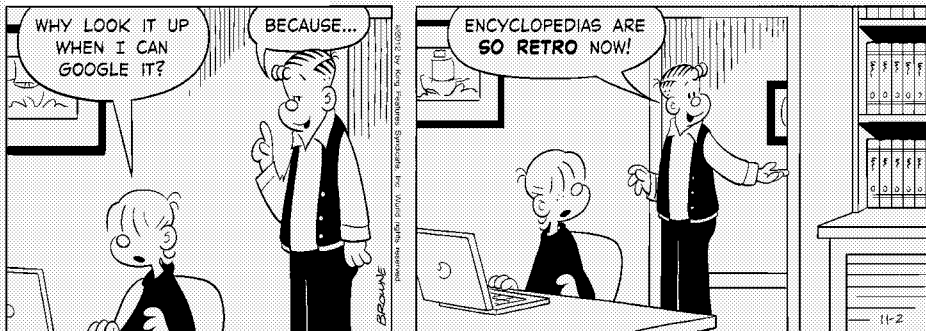

Think about it

"Drop the question what tomorrow may bring, and count as profit every day that Fate allows you." — Horace, Roman poet (65 B.C.-8 B.C.)
